QUICK VOTE SOUGHT TO SPEED PROGRAM

Each Permits Borrowing of Federal Funds for Self-Liquidating Work.

Two administration "must bills"—one creating a state hospital authority and the other broadening the power of the board of regents to borrow—were overwhelmingly approved by the Georgia senate yesterday and immediately rushed to the house of representatives for consideration early next week.

The bills, if passed by the house by January 29, place the state in position to obtain $4,000,000 or more for new buildings at the state insane hospital at Milledgeville, and would allow the board of regents leeway in obtaining federal funds by the millions for the enlargement of the fast-growing University System of Georgia.

The senate voted, 32 to 7, in favor of the bill creating the state hospital authority, and approved the regents bill by a vote of 29 to 0.

Victories for the two measures, listed No. 1 and No. 2 in the matter of importance to the Rivers administration, were considered by observers as a strong indication of the temper of the senate toward progressive legislation.

Ruppert Enriches Beauty

Former Chorus Girl Bequeathed One-Third of Multi-Million Brewing and Baseball Fortune.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(P)—An obscure former chorus girl yesterday, an heiress to millions today.

A mild sort of baseball fan one day, and third-owner of the world's greatest team the next.

That's the Cinderella story of Helen Winthrop Weyant, pretty, brown-haired and blue-eyed, who was named one of the three principal beneficiaries in the will of Colonel Jacob Ruppert whose fortune is estimated at between $30,000,000 and $70,000,000.

The story surprises no one more than her, she said today—and it did surprise practically everyone among the millions who knew the name and fame of the millionaire brewer and sportsman.

So shocked at first by news of her multi-million-dollar inheritance that she would talk to no one, Miss Weyant finally yielded to the requests for interviews.

"I don't know why he did it," she said. "I can't understand it. I had no idea that I was going to be remembered in that way. Colonel Ruppert was an old friend of my family and I have known him since I was a child."

Asked what she would do with

PRESIDENT OKAYS GUAM NAVAL WORK

He Stresses, However,
That World Conditions
Will Dictate Future.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(P)—President Roosevelt indorsed today legislation authorizing naval improvements at Guam, but the touchy question of fortifying that Pacific island was left open.

In fact, the President indicated that if world conditions changed, even the comparatively minor projects contemplated under the recently introduced legislation might be abandoned.

The impression prevailed in many quarters here that the Guam proposal was largely a diplomatic move, intended perhaps to prod Japan into a more sympathetic attitude toward American rights in the Far East.

However, the President denied that the Guam improvements were being pressed at this time as a possible basis for negotiating with Japan on Pacific problems.

(Advance word of the proposal

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—(P)—Taft Chavez is only seven days old but already a problem child.

Born on the American liner President Taft in Hawaiian waters of Chinese parents with a Spanish name—Mr. and Mrs. Victor Emanuel Chavez—little Taft one day will find his nationality a question.

His parents, already seeking the answer, were told by immigration authorities the question could not be settled until Taft reaches his majority.

Poesy Flowers in Assembly As Atkinson Swings His Plea

Bald-pated, red-headed, genial David S. Atkinson, Chatham county legislator, yesterday moved adjournment of the house of representatives for the week end with a decidedly poetic flourish.

His proposal for quitting time was delivered in the following rhyme:

"The week has ended, our work is done.

The orators have finished and we want to go home.

We have heard of taxes, and game and fish,

But aren't quite sure what the tax-payers wish,

So we've drawn our mileage and per diem pay

And intend to hear what the home folks say.

In order that this we all may learn, Mr. Speaker, I move we do now adjourn."

ATKINSON.

With such an atmosphere pervading the stately, gleaming legislative halls, there seemed to be nothing else to do. Both house and senate voted adjournment until 10 o'clock Monday morning.

YE BLUSHING BRIDE BLUSHES UNSEEN— 'TIS NOT MODESTY

SCOTTS BLUFF, Neb., Jan. 20.

(P)—Herman Everding, 26, farmer, was quite surprised to see his bride talking to a man he did not know on the street here.

He hurried up and challenged, "What are you doing talking to my wife?"

"Your wife? Don't make me laugh," the stranger replied. "Sure she's my wife. We were married a couple of weeks ago," the startled Everding shot back.

Equally startled, the stranger shouted, "She can't be your wife. She's mine. I married her a year and a half ago."

They turned to let the woman settle the dispute. She had disappeared.

Then the stranger introduced himself as United States Army Sergeant Frank Donahy, 25, of Fort Warren, Wyo.

Together they went to County Attorney Frank Glebe, who heard their stories and filed bigamy charges against the woman.

Officers sought her tonight.

Rivers Makes Strong Bid for United Action After 100 Lawmakers Band Together for Equality.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—In a ringing address before some 50 representatives of 13 southern and border states, Governor Rivers, of Georgia, tonight made a strong appeal for joint action on the part of southeastern and western sections in the congressional battle against discriminatory rail freight rates.

Rivers spoke at a dinner given in his honor by Lawrence Wood Robert Jr., of Atlanta and Washington, executive director of the Southeastern Governors' conference. It marked the second broadside heard during the day against the freight rate structure.

Other speakers included Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, and Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, who earlier in the Bitter Fight Presages Permanent Schism in Automotive Group.

DETROIT, Jan. 20.—(P)—Anti-Martin majority members of the United Automobile Workers' executive board, retaliating after their suspension by President Martin, voted unanimously tonight to impeach the president of the big CIO union.

The board preferred eight charges against Martin, who locked the international union's headquarters here this morning, removed records to his hotel and announced he had suspended 15 members of the board who have opposed him.

Those 15 and two other board members not disciplined by Martin joined in the unanimous vote to bring the union president to trial with a view to removing him from office.

The principal charges the board lodged against the former clergyman who heads the big auto union were that he had "conspired" with high figures in the automotive industry to "disrupt" the union.

Today's and tonight's fast-breaking developments widened the gap between two factions in the union as they waged a fierce fight to control its nearly 400,000 members.

Martin, in announcing suspension of his opponents, set up his own executive board; the anti-Martin board which had curtailed his powers during the past 10 days fought back. Each group claimed to be the constituted authority in the union and planned rival conventions to elect officers.

One indictment by the board against Martin said he had conspired with representatives of the Ford Motor Company "to create a secession movement within the union with the view to destroying the union and building a dual organization among the auto workers."

Another accused the UAW president of "conspiring with known and notorious enemies of the UAW and the CIO and the labor movement in general with the view of affecting the membership of the United Automobile Workers, disrupting the union and creating an organization of auto workers functioning in opposition to the UAW."

SENATORS ASSAIL HOPKINS AND WPA

'Purge' Figures Bitterly Denounce Politics, But Will Vote Confirmation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(P)—

Two Democratic senators, whom New Deal forces attempted to unseat in last year's elections, told the senate today they would vote for the confirmation of Harry Hopkins as secretary of commerce—and added a scathing indictment of politics in WPA while Hopkins headed that agency.

Senator Gillette, of Iowa, whose renomination Hopkins personally opposed, asserted, in a voice thick with emotion, that he would not let "personal resentment" determine how he would vote.

Senator Tydings, of Maryland, whom President Roosevelt tried personally to defeat, likewise said he would not be "vindictive." It was not Hopkins who opposed him, he said, "but a higher authority."

Tydings harshly criticized the President for opposing his renomination, asserting Mr. Roosevelt had used government-owned boats and automobiles in the course of his campaign against him, which the Maryland senator denounced.

U. S. BONDHOLDERS LIKELY TO SUFFER

Removal Climaxes Long Struggle of Schacht for Conservative Policy

By The Associated Press.

Adolf Hitler changed presidents of the Reichsbank yesterday in a shift that alarmed British business and was regarded by a high Commerce Department official at Washington as a slap at the United States.

To bring the powerful financial institution under full Nazi control, Hitler removed Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, who often quarreled with Nazi leaders over tremendous government expenditures, and named Economics Minister Walther Funk, Germany's Number One barter salesman, as Reichsbank head.

In British eyes Schacht represented soundness. There was a feeling that he was the only man who understood Germany's complicated currency system. He often had been a brake on Nazi spending schemes.

In Washington, officials who recently made a survey of the German situation described Schacht as friendly to this country and said Funk was noted for his animosity to the United States.

Only yesterday Funk threatened to transfer Germany's trade with America to the Balkans. The threat failed to worry American experts, who said Germany for a long time had been buying here only the goods she absolutely needed.

German securities fell about 4 per cent in the London market after the Berlin announcement, and there was a pronounced weakness of German marks in foreign exchange.

Specifically, Berlin expected the Reichsbank switch to accelerate credit inflation for rearmament financing, intensify Germany's economic drive through the Balkans, and delay for the time being at least the possibility that several hundred thousand Jews might emigrate with the aid of the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee.

Schacht's dismissal ended nego-

Gross Income Tax Advocated by Head

Would Abolish Ad Valorem and 128 'Nuisance' Levies in Broadening Base To Provide Funds.

If Governor Rivers' program is to be carried out in full, Revenue Commissioner T. Grady Head will recommend that the Georgia legislature enact a gross income tax and abolish the state ad valorem levy and 128 "nuisance" taxes.

The commissioner made this declaration last night following presentation to the chief executive and the general assembly of a report which said that if Georgia gets the money to "meet the increasing demands on government," it must come from a broader base of taxation—either from a sales tax or a gross income tax.

Favors Gross Levy.
Head said that he favored the gross income tax as the means of raising additional state revenue, if the legislature votes to enact additional taxes to pay full appropriations on the program started by Governor Rivers.

The Governor, in his second inaugural address, asserted that approximately $8,500,000 more will be needed to carry out the program in full.

Rivers is expected to address the legislature in a special message early next week, probably Tuesday, and to discuss with legislators the specific needs of the administration's program.

Counties Benefit.
Commissioner Head said abolishing the state's five mill ad valorem tax levy would place the counties of the state in position to make up the revenue losses they suffered from the homestead exemption act.

While the counties only lost a total of approximately $1,500,000, the state's five mill levy yields a total of about $4,000,000, he said.

Homestead Losses.
Head explained that the five-mill levy would bring in more than homestead losses in larger counties, while in others it might not quite make up all the loss suffered. Thus, some counties would not have to levy all of the five mills that the state would relinquish to them.

The report to the legislature did not recommend either the sales tax or the gross income tax, officials of the Revenue Department said last night. It merely recited findings and did not suggest that any tax be enacted. Such a report is required by the revenue reorganization act.

Nine States Studied.
The report was based on findings of W. A. Lufburrow, administrative aide to Head, after a study of certain tax laws of Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Ohio, Michigan, California and Indiana.

Concentrated study was devoted to sales and gross income tax laws of other states, including the liquor laws of Virginia and Alabama. Lufburrow asserted the 89-year-old ad valorem tax had reached the "saturation point" of cash production, that the net income levy is at its peak for several years to come and that levies are ineffectual in quantity to yield revenue of any consequence.

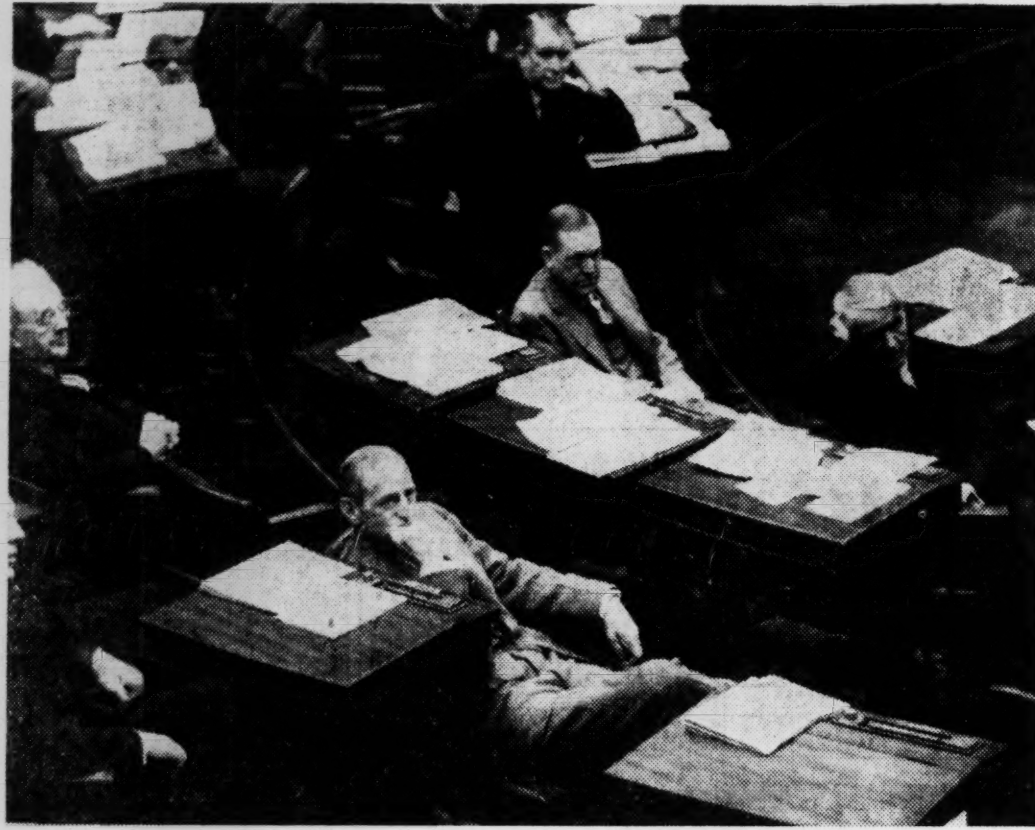

"Therefore," he said, "if sufficient revenue is to be realized to meet the needs of our people it must come from a tax measure providing for a sales tax or a gross income tax."

Liquor Legislation.
Turning to liquor legislation and revenue, the report said Georgia could "well afford to follow the Virginia plan which legalized the sale of alcoholic beverages on a state-wide basis, but at the same time provided an opportunity if and when desired for the people of a community to vote upon whether or not their sale should be continued."

Virginia took a profit of $1,940,433.32 from liquor in the fiscal year closed last June 30, it was reported, and an additional $1,462,556.49 from beer tax. Lufburrow emphasized that analysis of a survey of liquor laws "shows that only in those states where liquor was legalized in the entire state by legislative action, has revenue been produced in sufficient amount to make it worth-while."

Alabama's failure to do anything like as much business as Virginia is undoubtedly due largely to the fact that out of the total of 67 counties only 25 are legally wet," said the report in comparing state monopoly with and without local option.

The Alabama yield was reported at $2,394,287.75 for the fiscal year ended last September 30, with $500,000 of this derived from beer.

Indiana Example.
If Georgia should put on a gross income tax, Indiana was cited as a "pioneer" in this levy. Applying a 1 per cent levy, Indiana garnered $22,300,000 last year, allowing $3,000 retailers' exemption, $1,000 individual exemption, and reducing the levy to one-fourth of 1 per cent for wholesalers and manufacturers. The state has no net income tax.

(Georgia's per capita income was shown as $297 in 1937 compared to $524 for Indiana.)

Because of the exemptions provided by the Indiana law, the report continued, "it is one of the few laws with a broad base that does not tax the poorest class of citizens."

Such a law in Georgia, said Lufburrow, "in all probability would be the means of enabling the state to meet its present needs, and in all likelihood would supply enough revenue for some of the present tax laws to be repealed."

Sales Tax System.
Should Georgia consider enacting a sales tax, a study of the Louisiana and North Carolina levies was particularly recommended.

North Carolina, which leaves the general property tax entirely to local governments, levies a 3 per cent sales tax which yields $11,700,000 in 1938. In Louisiana, where the system of both states and local ad valorem is in use (as in Georgia), a 1 per cent sales levy produced $6,000,000 last year.

When the department of revenue was established by act of the 1937-38 special session, it was handed for administration three new laws, liquor legalization, homestead and personality tax exemptions, and classification of intangible property for taxation under new and lower rates.

Collection of intangibles taxes was delegated to local tax officials under the new act. Head's report asserted collection by the state probably would result in increased revenue.

The suggestion was made that the intangibles act, which taxes money 10 cents per $1,000, should be changed to make the rate 10 cents per $100 as in North Carolina and Kentucky, or 20 cents per $100 as in Virginia.

as an improper expenditure of government funds. "Why censure Harry Hopkins?" he shouted. "Is there a man in this body who doesn't know that Harry Hopkins did no more than was expected of him? Why make fish of one and fowl of the other?"

Senators Holt, Democrat, West Virginia, and Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, made speeches bitterly critical of Hopkins. Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, announcing he would vote for confirmation because the President was entitled to choose his own assistants, said also that there was a "wide divergence of opinion" as to whether Hopkins had exonerated himself of the political charges.

Norris to Defend.
Only Senator Norris, Independent, Nebraska, came to Hopkins' defense today, although Senator Barkley, Kentucky, the Democratic leader, had announced that he, Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, and Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, would speak in Hopkins' behalf.

Norris, white-haired veteran of the senate, noted for his independent views, faced the Democratic side of the chamber squarely and, including the entire Democratic membership in a sweeping gesture, asserted that the senate had refused to take politics out of relief.

He referred to the senate's rejection last year of amendments forbidding political activity in WPA. "It does not become us now to condemn somebody who has followed the law we enacted," he said. "I think Mr. Hopkins had one of the most difficult places ever given to a human being. We strangled him. We refused to put anything in the law to keep politics out. He'd be justified in letting politics creep in, although I don't think he did."

"Termites" Attacked.
Gillette criticized what he called a band of "political termites" who had crept into the Democratic party. Yet, he said, the President should have the right to select his own advisors.

"I know if I were President I would want that right," he said. "One of the last men on earth that I would want in my cabinet is Harry Hopkins."

TWO ARE BOUND OVER IN POST OFFICE THEFT
COLUMBUS, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP) Charged with having participated in the burglary of the Warm Springs post office on October 27, 1938, Melvin Howard Cline and Forest Claude Herring, of this city, were given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner N. A. Brown today and ordered can support. The Ramspect bill, which was introduced as far back as the twenty-fourth congress and is again pending before the lower chamber, was agreed by all present to be acceptable as a starting point for congressional action. This bill seeks to eliminate present-day discriminations in rates in southern and western territory.

Officers named to serve with Chairman Ramspect and Representative David T. Terry, of Arkansas, vice chairman, and Representative Charles F. McLaughlin, of Nebraska, secretary.

"I am wedded to no particular bill," Ramspect said. "I am willing to go along with any piece of legislation that will accomplish the purpose we all have in mind."

With the entire Georgia house delegation of 10 members present, were congressmen from Virginia, Arkansas, Texas, Tennessee, California, Arizona, Washington, Kentucky, Iowa, New Mexico, Mississippi, South Carolina, Alabama, Nebraska, Utah, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Louisiana and Wisconsin.

Advising the meeting to go slow in any affirmative action at this time, other than framing a definite program of procedure, Representative Terry said nothing would be gained by going on record against any plans the administration might have for other railroad legislation unless the freight rate angle were considered.

Promises Consideration.
Representative Virgil Chapman, of Kentucky, a high-ranking member of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, to which the Ramspect bill was referred, assured the gathering that all could surely agree on the general objective of the meeting and that the bill decided upon by the steering committee would receive every consideration and serious attention by his committee at the proper time.

Representative Eugene E. Cox, of California, agreed with Tarver that caution should be the watchword and that members of the bloc should assume an independent attitude toward other railroad legislation.

Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, chairman of the house committee on agriculture, advised the meeting to agree upon the form of legislation desired before any other action was taken, and that after a bill was drafted, hearings could then be demanded of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

Representative Fulmer, of South Carolina, who has a bill pending in the house which would force the appointment of members of the Interstate Commerce Commission from different sections of the country, lamented the fact that this commission now had no member to which the southeast could turn for guidance in their trouble.

Adopt Resolution.
Before the meeting adjourned,

Marriage Goal Of 99 Per Cent G.S.C.W. Frosh

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Marriage is the ultimate goal of 99 per cent of the freshman class at the Georgia State College for Women.

A sociological survey on the family made at the school showed the girls generally wanted a church wedding, "with all the fixings," and were for the most part agreed that a six months' engagement was about ideal.

The girls also said they hoped to move into their own homes immediately after the wedding. As a whole, the freshmen indicated in the survey they did not believe in divorce.

The average age of the freshman girl is 17, the survey found. It also noted that while about 75 per cent of the girls came from rural districts, most of them said they preferred to "live in town" when they got married.

Some expressed the view that a job "for a time" would be fine, but that a "career" definitely was not to be considered.

More than half of Georgia's 159 counties was represented, and more than 30 girls were questioned in the survey.

A Christmas card from "The Woodchopper of Doorn," otherwise known as ex-Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, is the proud possession of George D. Kitzinger, Atlanta magician.

And, although Mr. Kitzinger is well known for his sleight-of-hand ability, he states very clearly there is "no trick" in connection with this one and as proof points out he also has an autographed photo of the abdicated monarch.

In fact, the whole thing was very simple. About this time last year, he happened to notice a news story to the effect that the Kaiser was just about to celebrate his 79th birthday anniversary.

For "no particular reason," he decided to send a birthday card wishing Wilhelm II "many happy returns." The card was duly acknowledged, and Mr. Kitzinger received the autographed picture as a token of appreciation.

Then December rolled around and he decided that a Christmas card might well be in order. The card accordingly was sent and in return a Christmas greeting from the Kaiser arrived here for Mr. Kitzinger.

One side has a picture of the Dutch castle where the former German ruler has made his home since the World War, and the other has a message, carefully written in German by the "house marshal" whose name has not yet been deciphered. The message says:

"His Majesty, the Kaiser and Representative Terry's resolution was adopted unanimously:

"Resolved that during the seventy-sixth congress those interested in a more equitable system of freight rates join together in maintaining a freight rate committee that we elect a chairman, vice chairman and secretary; that the chairman appoint a steering committee to be composed of the officers and 15 members of the freight bloc."

Warning that patience has ceased to be a virtue, Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, insisted that those who wished to rid their sections of freight rate discriminations "should take the bull by the horns" and act now.

Representative Thomason, of El Paso, Texas, offered the Ramspect bill as a starting point for consideration, explaining that disgruntled shippers in his district had read the bill and were satisfied it was an excellent start, at least.

ATLANTA WOMAN HELD IN HI-JACKING

Liquor Found in Room Linked to Crime Through Serial Numbers.

Arrest of an Atlanta woman in connection with the recent holdup of a truck containing $4,000 of liquor was disclosed at Marietta yesterday by Sheriff George H. McMillan, of Cobb county.

Sheriff McMillan said the woman was listed as Lois Fears, 40, of a downtown hotel. He added she posted a $1,000 bond pending arraignment next Wednesday morning in Cobb superior court.

The woman, according to Sheriff McMillan, was arrested by Atlanta detectives who found in her room a quantity of liquor apparently linked to the holdup through serial numbers on the stamps.

The holdup occurred early in the morning of January 9. Two armed men halted the transport truck on the Dixie highway between Acworth and Kennesaw. They forced Glenn Bradford and E. B. Smith from the truck and drove off in the vehicle south toward Kennesaw.

The truck was found later in a ditch on an isolated road in north Cobb county. Its $4,000 bond cargo were gone. The liquor was consigned to Hal J. Aronson, Atlanta dealer, and was en route to this city from a Kentucky distillery.

A sociological survey on the family made at the school showed the girls generally wanted a church wedding, "with all the fixings," and were for the most part agreed that a six months' engagement was about ideal.

The girls also said they hoped to move into their own homes immediately after the wedding. As a whole, the freshmen indicated in the survey they did not believe in divorce.

The average age of the freshman girl is 17, the survey found. It also noted that while about 75 per cent of the girls came from rural districts, most of them said they preferred to "live in town" when they got married.

Some expressed the view that a job "for a time" would be fine, but that a "career" definitely was not to be considered.

More than half of Georgia's 159 counties was represented, and more than 30 girls were questioned in the survey.

A Christmas card from "The Woodchopper of Doorn," otherwise known as ex-Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, is the proud possession of George D. Kitzinger, Atlanta magician.

And, although Mr. Kitzinger is well known for his sleight-of-hand ability, he states very clearly there is "no trick" in connection with this one and as proof points out he also has an autographed photo of the abdicated monarch.

In fact, the whole thing was very simple. About this time last year, he happened to notice a news story to the effect that the Kaiser was just about to celebrate his 79th birthday anniversary.

For "no particular reason," he decided to send a birthday card wishing Wilhelm II "many happy returns." The card was duly acknowledged, and Mr. Kitzinger received the autographed picture as a token of appreciation.

Then December rolled around and he decided that a Christmas card might well be in order. The card accordingly was sent and in return a Christmas greeting from the Kaiser arrived here for Mr. Kitzinger.

One side has a picture of the Dutch castle where the former German ruler has made his home since the World War, and the other has a message, carefully written in German by the "house marshal" whose name has not yet been deciphered. The message says:

"His Majesty, the Kaiser and Representative Terry's resolution was adopted unanimously:

"Resolved that during the seventy-sixth congress those interested in a more equitable system of freight rates join together in maintaining a freight rate committee that we elect a chairman, vice chairman and secretary; that the chairman appoint a steering committee to be composed of the officers and 15 members of the freight bloc."

Warning that patience has ceased to be a virtue, Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, insisted that those who wished to rid their sections of freight rate discriminations "should take the bull by the horns" and act now.

Representative Thomason, of El Paso, Texas, offered the Ramspect bill as a starting point for consideration, explaining that disgruntled shippers in his district had read the bill and were satisfied it was an excellent start, at least.

"Woodchopper of Doorn" Sends Greetings

This is the face of the Christmas card received by George D. Kitzinger, of Atlanta, from ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, of Germany, showing his present home at Doorn, Holland.

"Best thanks for your friendly wishes" were expressed in carefully written German on the back of a Christmas card received by George D. Kitzinger, of Atlanta, from the former Kaiser.

HEARST SUSPENDS PICTORIAL REVIEW

Other Publications To Absorb Editorial Features.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Pictorial Review Company, Inc., announced today that Pictorial Review Magazine would suspend publication with the March issue. The company said its circulation and editorial features would be, as far as practicable, absorbed by other publications.

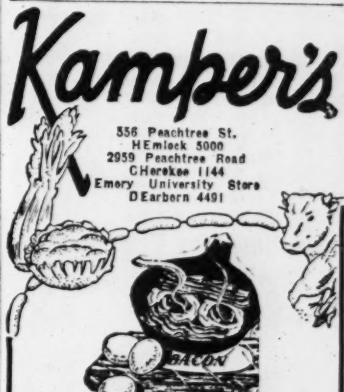

The magazine, a Hearst publication, recently was combined with Delineator. No explanation of the magazine's suspension was given, but it was in line with a series of moves designed to consolidate Hearst's manifold holdings.

NAZI GROWTH TERMED WORLD-WIDE PROBLEM

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Hans Simons, German scholar and exile, told the University of Georgia institute of public affairs today that national socialism in Germany had become a world problem.

He asserted Germany's attacks on the Jewish race and her policy in regard to self-determination of minorities were two reasons national socialism was a world concern.

Another reason he said was the "superiority complex" of German leaders ready to consider possible "any extension of German power."

Smith Blasts Cotton Parley

South Carolina Senator Incensed When Told F. D. R. Approves Plan; Brazil Sounded Out.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(P)—The United States already has sounded out Brazil, it was learned today, on a proposal for an international conference to deal with the problem of low cotton prices.

The Agriculture Department's attaché at Buenos Aires, Paul O. Nyhus, discussed the proposal with representatives of the Brazilian government at the recent Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru, authoritative sources said.

President Joins.

President Roosevelt joined Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today in expressing this country's desire to see a co-operative international effort to improve prices.

The chief executive told a press conference he believed an international meeting would be a very good thing.

It also was learned that the conference suggestion has been discussed informally with representatives of Egypt and India, major American competitors in world cotton markets. Farm officials close to the situation said there was little hope at this time for co-operation with Manchuria and Japan-controlled China.

Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, rebelled when told of the administration suggestion, asserting it was "an outrageous proposal to consider seriously."

Smith declared America produces the world's best cotton, and said those "who contemplate this conference seem to take it for granted that the only consideration is the quantity of cotton the world needs. They have no regard whatsoever for the character and quality of the cotton."

Wallace, discussing earlier this week the possibility of a conference, suggested an agreement might be reached for an "equitable" division of world markets and adjustment of production in line with needs. Such an agreement, he said, would make it possible to eliminate international price-cutting and dumping.

Await Conference.

Farm officials expressed the opinion this government would await the outcome of an international wheat conference expected to be held this spring, before making formal proposals for a cotton meeting.

Meanwhile, the domestic cotton problem continued to receive attention of Agriculture Department officials and congressmen. They studied reports that buyers of American cotton were encountering difficulties in obtaining sufficient supplies of the better grades of the staple because 10,000,000 bales are tied up under government loans.

World stocks of American cotton, exclusive of that under loan, and reserves held by consuming establishments, were estimated by government economists at about 11,100,000 bales at the beginning of the current marketing season.

Should domestic consumption and exports continue at the present rate, 11,370,000 bales would be needed, they said, before the 1939 crop is harvested.

BOARD MAY CLOSE ALL KINDERGARTENS

President Cook Says Declining Revenues Forebodes Them.

Atlanta's school system must have additional funds or the kindergartens and some other services now being rendered are doomed, Ed S. Cook, president of the board of education, said yesterday.

"We could spend $5,000,000 annually and still be cramped because there are many fine things we could undertake in education, but I don't think the taxpayers can pay the costs," he added.

"I don't think there is any doubt that kindergartens will be discontinued within the next few years. We are going to have an even harder job balancing the budget next year because the city budget law operations will cut another 1 per cent from school appropriations."

The Cook statement came as school officials were still negotiating to bring 1939 expenditures and anticipated revenues in line. Further action by the budget commission awaits the return to Atlanta Monday of City Comptroller B. Graham West.

RURAL POWER GROUP NAMES '39 OFFICERS

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

GRiffin, Ga., Jan. 20.—George W. Patrick, of Spalding county, has been elected president of the Central Georgia Electric Membership Corporation, a farm co-operative supplying lights and power to a dozen middle Georgia counties.

Other new officers include O. D. Price, Jasper county, vice president, and P. J. Evans, Butts county, secretary and treasurer.

The board of directors, increased from 6 to 11 members, is composed of T. F. Freeman, Monroe county; C. P. Crew, Morgan; V. G. Turner, Henry; F. T. Denham, Putnam; W. T. Roberts, Jones; J. B. Woods, Fayette, and George Bell, Lamar.

STATE CHARTER GIVEN JAYCEES IN LAGRANGE

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

LAGRANGE, Ga., Jan. 20.—John Underwood, of Mount Vernon, president of the Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce, addressed members of the local Jaycee unit last night at a meeting featured by presentation of a state charter to the recently organized body.

S. W. Adams, president of the LaGrange unit, received the charter from Mr. Underwood. A national charter was presented the group by Philip Eberling, national president, in November.

WIFE OF SOVIET PREMIER JOINS HUSBAND IN CABINET

MOSCOW, Jan. 20.—(P)—Paulina Zhemchuzhina, wife of Premier Molotov, whose success as manager of the Soviet government's business in cosmetics was attributed to use of American methods, has been appointed commissar of its fish industry in the Soviet Union.

The appointment was announced today in division of the food commissariat into three parts: Fish, meat and dairy foods.

Mrs. Zhemchuzhina has traveled extensively. In 1936 she was the guest of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the White House. She learned much from American industry, whose methods she employed here to produce perfumes, soaps and lipsticks.

In her new job Mrs. Zhemchuzhina, whose name would be Pauline Pearl in English, will have charge of all fisheries, of the transport of fish, of fishing canneries, and of collective fish farms—Soviet fishing villages.

The new commissar, perhaps the only woman in the world entitled to sit with her husband in cabinet meetings, had been vice commissar of the food industry under E. G. Kabanoff, who was removed.

DEALERS TO SEEK GAS PRICE PACT

Meeting Will Be Held Tuesday To Discuss Agreement.

The gasoline price war in Atlanta will be discussed by dealers at a general meeting to be held at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Chamber of Commerce hall, it was announced yesterday.

The meeting is being sponsored by the Atlanta Association of Petroleum Retail Dealers. Officers said efforts would be made to get the retailers together on the prices to be charged. Slicing of gallonage prices in the past week has sent the cost to the motorist down to 19 1-2 cents for regular gas in most stations.

Opening Attacks Revolutionized, Sharpsteen Tells His Bridge Class

Universal Adoption of the Culbertson Strong Notrump Cited as Cause; Three Classes Will Again Be Conducted Next Week.

Universal adoption of the Culbertson strong notrump by leading contract players throughout the nation has completely revolutionized methods of opening attack, Harold Sharpsteen told members of The Constitution's bridge school yesterday in the Atlanta Woman's Club.

Notrump and trump bids today, although closely interwoven, are as different as day and night, the noted expert, who will continue with classes next week Monday, Wednesday and Friday, declared.

Present-day standard notrump openings are distribution-showing bids, Sharpsteen explained, designed to indicate precise 4-3-3-3 hand patterns and a minimum of four high-card tricks.

Suit openings promise nothing definite as to hand pattern, he said, and are made with as little as 2 1-2 to 3 honor-tricks.

In the question of biddable suits, The Constitution expert pointed out, notrump disregards any four-card holding with requirements for one notrump, as:

S-A-K-J-9 D-Q-J-3
H-Q-J-4 C-A-7-5

It is better to show the four honor-tricks and the 4-3-3-3 hand pattern than to name the spade suit, he said.

Outlining responses for notrump openings, Sharpsteen declared partners will simplify their problems by raising the notrump in preference to taking out in suits whenever holding 1 1-2 honor-tricks minimum. Suit takeouts are weakness bids, indicating, as a rule, one honor-trick maximum.

At each class yesterday requirements for notrump openings of one, two, three and four were given, together with correct responses for each bid.

Complete details of next week's lesson program will be announced in tomorrow's Atlanta Constitution.

Readers may join classes at any time during the series, as each lesson is complete within itself.

WINSHIP ANNOUNCES NIECE'S ENGAGEMENT

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Jan. 20.—(P)—Governor Blanton Winship announced today the engagement of his niece and hostess, Miss Katherine M. Winship, to First Lieutenant Thomas H. Hayes, of the Sixty-fifth infantry, United States army.

Miss Winship is the daughter of the late Emory Winship, of the United States navy, and a native of Macon, Ga.

The date for the wedding was not announced.

ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 21, 1939.

TO END TAX INEQUALITIES

Over a long period of time tax exempt government bonds have lured private capital from venturesome enterprises into the less attractive, even though more certain from the standpoint of return, securities of federal, state and municipal governments. The exemptions were considered necessary to attract funds into channels providing interest payments considerably below those of private investment.

Since 1929, however, investors have leaned more and more away from issues in which the element of chance is present in favor of the more stable, if less attractive, government issues. The problem has been one of forcing private capital back into private investment. Federal and state bonds have sold at a premium, while industry has been confronted with a log-jam barring capital expenditures financed from the public market. Less and less "small" money, as well as amassed fortunes, has been available. Of course, a part of this money conservatism has been forced through administration attitude and by retrenchment on the part of large industry. Today, however, the nation is emerging into a period in which capital is again vitally necessary for private enterprise if national income is to be built up.

So it is particularly timely that the President asks congress to eliminate tax exemption privileges on federal, state and municipal securities. In the first place it opens up a new source of tax revenues, estimated to have a potential yield of $353,000,000 to the federal government and $100,000,000 to the states. In the second place, the lowered attractiveness of the government issues should operate to force cautious capital back into sound private enterprise. It is estimated there are $65,000,000,000 of tax-exempt securities now current and, of course, these will remain in this category until paid off. As they now operate, many persons with large incomes have been able to escape income tax payments entirely, placing an unfair burden upon the remainder of the citizens. This inequitable status would, over a period of a comparatively few years, become adjusted.

The balance in favor of the individual in the higher income brackets was illustrated by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes this week in testimony before the special senate committee considering the problem. He said that, when savings of taxes were considered, a man with a large annual income would profit just as much by buying a tax-exempt bond bearing three per cent interest as by buying a taxable security returning 10.71 per cent. This practically bars these funds from private investment bearing even a modicum of risk. On the other hand, a man with a $5,000 income would find a three per cent tax-exempt bond equivalent only to a 3.12 per cent taxable security. The factors have operated against the common good, then, rather than in favor of the small investor.

The President also asks the reciprocal taxation of federal and state employees, now exempt from income levies under a principle first set up by the supreme court and operate since the early days of the republic. Returns from this change would be comparatively negligible, yet sizeable nevertheless. The President's message is based on a recent supreme court decision upholding the federal government's right to levy on salaries of the New York Port Authority, a quasi-governmental corporation operated jointly by New York and New Jersey. Hitherto it had been thought a constitutional amendment would be required to impose this cross-levy generally, but under this decision it is believed that the objective can be accomplished through a simple legislative enactment.

A storm of congressional opposition to this phase may be expected. Congressmen, their patronage recipients and state and municipal employees, will maintain that this constitutes "double taxation," although the governments can collect in this manner from private citizens. Mr. Roosevelt wisely asks, however, that the legislative statute be enacted for the decision of the supreme court, rather than made operative through the cumbersome method of constitutional amendment.

Both requests will operate to remove inequalities from the tax structure of the nation and, despite opposition, may be expected to prevail.

THOSE SURPRISED JAPANESE

The Japanese have a peculiar aptness for "surprise" whenever another nation makes a move which, fairly, may be attributed to a previous provocative Japanese action. They have been astonished at American plans for strengthening the navy. They have been amazed at the decision to build up the defenses at Hawaii. They have been dumbfounded at the idea the Panama Canal should be made invulnerable to attack. Now that rumors of an American base at Guam, some 1,500 miles from Japan, have been circulated abroad, they are again surprised.

From the Japanese point of view it was a natural incident in the "Rising Sun" campaign to march into China without the formality of declaring their intentions, much less war. The United States, "still thinking it is night after the sun has risen," is not supposed to be surprised at anything. Even the Japanese bragadocio about "wiping out the American navy," following the Guam rumor, was supposed to be received in the spirit of the "good neighbor."

The truth of the matter is most Americans are past being surprised. This is particularly true of the businessman in China. Having witnessed the deliberate destruction of American property valued at more than $200,000,000 during the "present incident," he is beginning to feel that anything may happen. The nature and wide scope of the Japanese campaign seems to him to be a part of a gigantic scheme to acquire complete and undisputed control over the entire eastern portion of Asia.

As if in confirmation of this belief, which has been prevalent for some time, 10 examples of infringement of American trade rights in China, in violation of treaties, have been cited in a cablegram from the American Chamber of Commerce at Tientsin. These include Japanese restrictions on imports, controlled monopolies, embargoes against important export products, forced circulation of Japanese bank notes, exchange control, isolation of foreign concessions and absolute domination over all communications.

But, should the United States retaliate, say with an embargo on silk, or decide that no more scrap iron should leave these shores, or even express surprise, it would doubtless occasion additional "surprise" in Japan.

One of the most peculiar quirks in the oblique mental processes of the "goose-stepping" nations is the assumed right of their leaders to violate treaties; to threaten, to browbeat, to denounce other peoples in the most violent terms. Yet, at the same time, they display a rare sensitiveness, not to say vulnerability, to the slightest criticism from beyond their borders. Can it be that the totalitarian peoples are not as "totalitarian" as their dictators have led them to believe?

WHEN PROHIBITION FAILED

Advocates of prohibition of alcoholic beverages should have learned, by this time, that legalistic ban is the wrong method for the inculcation of temperance. The "experiment" of nation-wide prohibition proved one thing, emphatically. That is, the craver after intoxicants doesn't care whether he satisfies himself in accordance with the law or through the ministrations of the bootlegger.

If there are any who still feel prohibition is the road to sobriety, they could learn a lesson from a recent case in Kansas City, Mo. The doctors at the general hospital there can supply full details.

A patient was brought in, in a highly intoxicated condition. The doctors were puzzled by the richness of the purple complexion the man displayed. They investigated.

The man had been on a drinking spree and his wife had followed the theory of prohibition in her effort to stop it. She had locked him in his room and removed his whisky. Whereupon the man had drunk bay rum, shampoo liquid, perfume, rubbing alcohol, witch hazel, hair oil and spirits of ammonia. He found his own free lunch by munching and swallowing 100 aspirin tablets and washed these down with a bottle of black hair dye, as a chaser. Latest reports by the doctors was that, after lengthy use of a stomach pump, they thought the patient would recover.

After a couple of double-header holidays, Monday is again falling on Monday. With June in January, however, everything remains nice and confused.

Effrontery is that which, if the unscrupulous fellow were speaking for our side, would be a bold stand.

In Kentucky, a girl shot a man by mistake for a deer and then married him. But that way you need two licenses.

Editorial of the Day

MR. ICKES PULLS SOME BONERS

(From The Macon Telegraph.)
Harold L. Ickes recently engaged in a joint debate on the air with Frank Gannett, of Rochester, N. Y., owner of a chain of newspapers.

Naturally it is not easy to present documentary evidence to refute all sorts of charges of which the other party has no notice. Mr. Gannett was able to correct his opponent as to many statements he made regarding the Gannett newspapers, but it was not until later that the full extent of the Ickes recklessness could be established.

Ickes said that scientific studies of the effect of tobacco on the human system were deliberately excluded by the newspapers from their columns. The clear implication was that they were dominated by the cigaret advertisers.

Dr. Raymond Pearl, of Johns Hopkins University, who made the studies and prepared the material, now comes forward and says that, so far from not having been given publicity, "the matter has been printed in every cross roads newspaper in the country and the clippings have been delivered to me by the post."

Ickes charged that the New York Herald Tribune refused to print an advertisement of George Seligman's book, "Lords of the Press." The Herald Tribune states that no such advertisement was refused.

He further charged that the Herald Tribune censored and discontinued an advertisement of the book, "America's Sixty Families."

The fact was that the Herald Tribune printed the advertisement, only to discover that it was libelous. It then printed a retraction of the libelous material, signed by the author and publisher, and continued to carry the advertisement, minus the libelous material.

These substantial deviations from the truth will give a clear idea of the relative standards of accuracy as between the newspapers and the reckless Mr. Ickes.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

THE MOSCOW VACANCY WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The President's management of foreign affairs is generally sure and always daring. There are moments, however, when it is also pucky. It has rarely been more pucky than in his recent efforts to fill the vacant Moscow embassy.

Pretty nearly everyone for whom the White House wished to find a place has been rumored gazetted ambassador to the Soviet Union—among others, the new attorney general, Frank Murphy; the friend, Ed Flynn, the next Dan Roper, and the still surviving secretary of labor, Miss Frances Perkins. Offers were probably made to at least two of these.

Now comes well-authenticated reports that offers have also been made to two habitués of Wall Street.

They are Sidney Weinberg, a partner in Goldman, Sachs & Co., and Ben Smith, the celebrated stock market speculator, who was called "Sell 'Em Ben" in the days when President Hoover gave him the chief blame for the Hoover bear market.

The reason for the President's two choices is sufficiently obvious. His initial experience with William C. Bullitt convinced that idealists were out of place in Russia. The subsequent success of Joe Davies, a sleek and prosperous lawyer-lobbyist with a multi-millionaire wife, naturally suggested that someone of his type would be the best choice. The Davies family arrived in Moscow with a grandiose yacht, a vast cargo of frozen food and a remarkable appetite for grandeur. The commissars took to the Honorable Joe as though he had been a long-lost brother, clearly indicating that his preference was for a sort of comic-strip capitalist, and the showier the better.

MESSANGER AND NEWSBOY Weinberg, while far from being a comic-strip capitalist, would have been sufficiently representative of capitalism to meet the Russians' requirements. A short, energetic, genial fellow, he started life as a messenger boy and is now a director of more corporations than he can remember. His position at Goldman, Sachs & Co. gives him considerable financial power, and he is one of the New Deal's prize time businessmen. He is often in Washington, sometimes for a visit to the White House, and sometimes to pass the day with such high officials as Chairman William O. Douglas, of the SEC.

The Moscow embassy was offered to him some time ago, in a message from the President carried by Joe Davies. Weinberg declined, and Ben Smith was the next candidate in line. Smith and Weinberg, Ed Flynn, the powerful boss of the Bronx, journeyed to Washington last week, and Flynn pressed Smith's claims upon the President. It is not entirely positive that the Flynn-Roosevelt luncheon was followed by an invitation to Smith to go to Russia, but it is said on good authority that the President listened sympathetically to Flynn.

Smith should satisfy the Russians much better than Weinberg, however. He got started in a small way, as a newspaper boy, but he worked his way up to a position far more dramatic than any paltry banker's. He is one of the great international speculators, known from Bombay to London and Berlin to Tokyo for his shrewd coups. While Hoover exaggerated his role, he was unquestionably the most conspicuous trader on the short side during the depression. His fortune is said to be immense, and credence is lent to the rumor that it is invested in the United States, and in the "all your eggs in one basket" principle, by his habit of hopping from nation to nation by plane. In fact, he is the arch-type of capitalist entrepreneur.

BELOVED MONEY-CHANGERS The New Deal's relationship with Weinberg and Smith illustrates more than the President's occasional pookiness in foreign matters. It's generally supposed that the White House regards all businessmen, and especially all Wall Street men, as "money-changers in the temple." Exceptions are made, however, for individuals like Weinberg, Smith, the broker, Paul Shields, and the Dillon-Read partner, James Forrestal, all of whom had the wit to be on the side of the right candidate in 1932.

Such is the nature of politics. There is nothing invidious in the fact that these men, having been campaign contributors in '32 and friends to the Capital thereafter, are now welcomed in the same chambers of the Capital where their colleagues and competitors are most disliked. All have tried to please the New Deal, where other businessmen have not. For example, back in 1933, fearful advisers thought it unwise of the President to see much of "Sell 'Em Ben." Smith promised the President to abandon short trading, and their friendship continued. But, for the sake of real trading, and their friendship continued. But, for the sake of real trading, it is well to remember that "money-changers" and "Wall Streeters" are not invariably synonymous, even to New Dealers. SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

I read, with satisfaction,
How within the net of law,
They're catching lots of speeders
Whose flagrant guilt is raw.

But still they haven't caught him,
That guy I'm gunning for,
Who passes me, each morning,
While I meticulously observe
The very letter of that twenty-five-mile law.

Accumulation Of Volumes.

Wonder how many books utterly useless to their possessors are to be found in the average private library? Those books which have become useless with the passage of time, which are never taken from the shelves and which cannot, possibly, serve any conceivable purpose of research or information.

This thought arose when, recently, I decided to do something about the amount of stuff that had accumulated during the years in this office.

There were two shelves, filled to capacity with books. I suppose each one, when first placed there, had appealed as something worth keeping, reading when opportunity offered.

But, says I, we'll weed out the ones we don't want and get rid of them. Those worth keeping ought to be easily accommodated in one shelf. Then we'll have the other for different use.

We had to make our desires and needs quite elastic to come near to filling the shelves. Even now there is a vacant space of a foot or so, at one end.

The others? Don't ask for them. They have already been presented to a scholastic librarian who believes he has readers who'd be interested in some of them, in every volume of the lot.

That Attic At Home.

I have a theory that storage rooms and attics are a real handicap to the real estate business. If it wasn't for such places, there'd be more residence sales every year.

You see a family lives in a certain house for a number of years. During that time it accumulates—just like the books—vast amounts of old stuff, which, possibly, for sentimental reasons, hasn't been possible to destroy. All this stuff goes to the attic, or storage room, and there it accumulates dust as it decays through the years.

The time comes when the family is tempted to trade the home for a newer, or perhaps more desirable, house. They are interested and would probably be a live prospect for a good realty salesman.

But then the thought of moving comes. It wouldn't be so hard to call the moving people and transfer the actual furnishings from one house to another. But all that stuff in the attic would have to be gone over. Sorted out to see what to burn, or give away, and what to keep. It would be a sentimental, disagreeable, long and trying job.

Oh, shucks! Let's stay in the old home. It may be out-of-date in some ways, but it suits us, doesn't it?

And another real estate salesman lost a customer, all because of an attic and its contents.

Traffic Jitters.

This is the kind of thing that gives me the jitters, occasionally, when driving the old bus in Atlanta.

Going home, on Wednesday night, Oct. 10, on the Leona, I was in the middle of the street, away from the right-hand curb. But no one should have been passing me, at the speed I traveled, on either side—even the lawful left. Anyways, the space between my car and the curb was such that there couldn't have been much more than six inches to spare.

And the fellow who passed to my left, was almost within fender reach.

That kind of thing gives me the jitters. Imagination paints too vivid a picture of what would have happened if I had swerved a trifle, either way. Neither driver gave any warning, whatever. But I might have glimpsed one car, coming from the rear, before the other, and turning out of one danger zone, crowded into the other, with resultant disaster for us both.

Why do so many drivers pass you from the rear, when you are traveling between 25 and 30 miles per hour, when the city speed limit is 25 m.p.h., anyway?

I wish they wouldn't do it.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Wednesday, January 21, 1914: "MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 20.—The Wisconsin legislature, which provides for the issuance of marriage licenses only upon a certificate of a clean bill of health, was this afternoon declared unconstitutional by Judge F. C. Eschweiler, of the circuit court."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Monday, January 21, 1889: "The Rev. Dr. Henry McDonald, pastor of the Second Baptist church, will give that celebrated lecture, 'A Vacation in Europe,' at the First Baptist church in Birmingham tonight."

Opera Revived.

One of the great patriotic operas of the pre-revolutionary era, Michael Ivanovich Glinka's "A Life for the Czar," will be revived in Moscow in January. Its new Soviet name is "Ivan Susanin."

Susanin was a peasant who, in the seventeenth century, saved the Czar from assassination by sacrificing his own life.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Strangely NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The Labor Review, of Minneapolis, prints on page one of its current edition a "strangely interesting suggestion. It says that a recent issue of this column indicates that your correspondent has volunteered to provoke Tom Mooney or his friends to words or actions that would be discrediting. As to whether this is prophecy or warning, the paper goes no further. Mussolini has sometimes said that of the press of one country or another didn't hush he might be provoked to something.

The column in question was a piece pointing out that Mooney was not by the Communists, whose leader, Josef Stalin, Mooney admires, and who would have shot him quickly in similar circumstances as an opponent of the existing regime, but by the American people and the workings of the American system. It also pointed out that Mooney is not the leader or even a leader of American labor, and insisted that his release was a victory for the American people and American rights and a rebuke to the Communists and their way—which would have been to kill him. Mooney himself has expressed approval of the Communist way, for in a conversation with your correspondent in August about a year ago he justified the execution of the political heretics in Moscow on the ground that they were enemies of the state. He himself held Leon Trotsky guilty of the same capital offense without trial. He said Trotsky, too, was an enemy of the Russian state, and this verdict was delivered by a man who at that very moment was complaining that his own trial had been farcical.

Needs No Provocation The Minneapolis paper calls this discussion the act of an agent provocateur. But Mooney needs no provocation to discredit words. His words discredited him in advance of that writing which believers in the present system, for he has made no secret of his belief that the American form of society and government are outmoded or of his intention to work for a new and, as he believed, better one.

A similar declaration against the existing system in Russia would be punished in the manner which Mooney justified as to the Moscow executions. So it is obvious that if the Communists had anything at all to do with Mooney's liberation and the belated vindication of the American system they betrayed their own principles.

The Minneapolis paper ignores completely the question of Communist support of Mooney, and fails to mention his attitude on the Russian way with dissenters. It does not go into the fact that only recently in Russia men have been executed for framing innocent Russians, who, unlike Mooney, were quickly and permanently faced on framed evidence. So they have their Sacco-Vanzetti and Mooney mishaps in the promised land and many Mooneys in their prisons for refusing to surrender the produce of their farms, many Mooneys in prison charged with inefficiency or laziness on their jobs.

The Communists who were so indignant about Mooney's case in this country have said nothing about these small irregularities in Russia, and on the question of perjured testimony in Mooney's trial it is fair to ask when any Communist became so sensitive about a small matter of perjury, if perjury would serve the party line. Indeed, any Communist who faltered at a little job of perjury on a party job would be severely disciplined.

Question Of Names Although there is a Communist party in this free country (and who can imagine an anti-Communist party in Russia?), it is a question whether it is permissible to call a man Communist who is not a Communist. It is safe and legal to call a man even a Communist, a New Dealer, and many Communists call themselves New Dealers. It is even permissible to call a man a Republican, although a Communist might justly for vindication and ask damages on the ground that on some trip to Russia he might be placed in peril of death by the accusation.

The Labor Review in this case seems to have been guilty of careless reading or of confusing labor with this country with Communism. They are not synonymous, and the discussion which it regards as an attempt at provocation to some unnamed excess only insisted that if Mooney had been dealt with by this country as a man in corresponding circumstances would have been treated in Communist Russia there would have been no big parade for Tom Mooney in San Francisco.

Not Enough Doctors.

Soviet Russia's doctors still are overworked, but their number is rapidly increasing. Latest statistics show more than 110,000 physicians and surgeons looking after the health of the 170,000,000 inhabitants of the U. S. S. R. In 70 medical colleges 100,000 students are preparing to enter the profession.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE EIGHTY PER CENT Recently a survey was made by members of a graduated class of a north Georgia high school. It revealed that of the class members only 20 per cent remained in their communities. The others had gone to other communities, most of them to Atlanta and other cities.

There probably was a very good reason for their leaving. There was nothing to make them want to remain.

That is happening, not only in Georgia, but in other parts of the south. Of all the young people under 21 who were on the farms of the south 10 years ago, less than 50 per cent of them are there today.

They come to the cities. There is not much for them there. There are four or five waiting for every job that is open. A job becomes more and more difficult to find. Yet each week and each day the farms lose some of their young people.

It is no good writing articles which say they should remain on the farm; that they should make a place for themselves in their own community. If there is no place for them; if there is no opportunity, they will not stay. They will try a new field. It is human nature.

There must be opportunity. There must be some inspiration, some tangible substance.

PROVIDING OPPORTUNITY It is easy to understand why the government of Germany obtained the support of most of its young people. It offered them something they did not have. There followed in the wake of the collapse of the German republic, such an economic collapse there were no jobs, no future, no opportunity.

There came the new appeal—Germany for Germans. There came work, perhaps in labor camps—but still, work. There came new ambition and opportunity. Quite inevitably, the young people took it up and began to follow it with fanatical zeal.

The answer to all the spirit of nationalism which is sweeping parts of the world is bound up in that one idea. There is created an intense nationalistic fervor—a belief that if all foreign interests are thrown out; that if the country is made strong, there will, in some manner, be provided new strength and opportunity for the individual.

That will cause them to march and demonstrate; to shout and cheer and believe.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING It is possible vocational training will accomplish more than any other single factor. Certain it is that for years a very high percentage of the high school graduates have been turned out with no practical training at all and no possibility of attending college.

The farm boy who knew he could not go to an agricultural college received a semi-classical preparation for college. Nothing he got in high school interested him in his farm; nothing he received trained him for the farm.

This, of course, was not the fault of the high school or its teachers. They were following the system. The system has been in change. Now, in many rural high schools, there is to be vocational training in agriculture. Even in the city of Atlanta there is a vocational school which gives practical training. It has meant more to the life of the city than generally is known.

AN ILLUSTRATION Last Thursday night I attended a father-son dinner in the Grayson High School. It was given by the club of high school boys, "The Future Farmers of America."

It was inspiring to see and hear the high school students, sitting beside their fathers, climb to their feet and tell, in well-chosen language, what they had done and what their plans were for the year.

One told of his pigs which he, a high school boy, had been given to raise. Formerly his father had gone "halves" with a neighbor on raising them. The boy had pigs which were more than twice the weight at the same age, of those raised on "halves." They were parasite-free. There were those who talked of their fields, their reforestation, of livestock. They had plans. They knew what they were doing. They knew what they wanted to do.

Their fathers, some of whom spoke and said they had been "hard-headed" about it, were most enthusiastic.

"We have needed leadership," said one. "This will supply it. These boys will become real leaders."

The vocational schools actually have revitalized entire rural communities.

The answer is plain. They supply an interest. They show an outlet for ambition. They provide opportunity. They are a bright spot for the future.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My dear Louise:
Yes, I know that Mae forgot to invite you to her party. And I know that every instinct in your system urges you to get even by not inviting her to yours. But that would not be the end of it. She would forget about her offense and remember only that you had wronged her. So she would feel the same urge to retaliate, and then it would be your turn, and so on without end.

Somebody, sometime, must be big enough and sensible enough to return good for evil, or at least ignore the evil, and the best time to do it is before repetition makes a little wrong seem great.

All that makes life pleasant and enjoyable is now threatened in all parts of the earth by the same stupid and childish folly.

One of our best-known authors, though eminently sane in other matters, recently urged us to start another shameful cycle. His idea was that the people of each community should make a house-to-house search for toys, books and trinkets made in Germany, and burn them in a public bonfire as a protest against Nazi brutality.

Of course the next step would be a similar gesture of protest by Germans, which we in turn would resent and repay.

Did you ever hear ill-bred kids yelling at one another: "Did, too! Didn't, neither!" till they were breathless? It is only one degree siller than exchanges of abuse by national officials.

When one of our officials makes a speech insulting Germany, he seems to be speaking for all of us. He says he is speaking only as a private citizen; but he knows full well that his words have weight only because of his position, so he uses his official rank to give force to his private opinions. And all of us share the humiliation when Germans come back with columns of insults to even the score.

Whether it is done by irresponsible officials or neighbors or little girls, it is the same old evil business of "feuding," compounded of malice and all uncharitableness.

No matter how "right" you may be, retaliation is wholly wrong, and all it brings anybody in the end is suffering and shame.

$2,486,972 Health Program Sought

'Basic' State Needs Are Cited by Abercrombie in Appeal for Adequate Services; U.S. Aid Given

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
The State Department of Health yesterday asked the legislature to provide $2,486,972 to assist in financing a "basic health program" in co-operation with individual counties and the federal government.

An immediate need for the current year of $4,188,030 was cited by the report, including $1,105,000 for building and equipment. In addition to the funds for the basic program, $1,420,000 was needed for tuberculosis treatment and $150,000 for cancer control. This would establish a total annual maintenance of $3,083,000, the report said.

County Co-operation.
Under the proposal outlined by Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, state health director, counties would co-operate in the program with a 20-cent per capita levy. This would amount to $82,560 and the federal government would provide the $450,382, the department estimated.

Dr. Abercrombie said the present state appropriation of $600,000 annually was sufficient only to preserve the status of the current program. He pointed out this appropriation has not been paid in full, the health department having been paid on percentages of funds.

State health expenditures averaged $83,668 in a five-month period last year, which was $1,004,002 per year, the director said, "leaving a bare reserve of $46,000 for emergency and further development of local health services."

Disease Costs.
Dr. Abercrombie said disease costs Georgia "an estimated $155,302,763 annually." He said a "tremendous reduction" could be made with the application of known preventive measures.

At present, the director said, 1.3 per cent of the Georgia tax dollar goes to public health. This was based on the 1938 figures of $444,000 for general health work and $190,300 for the Alto tuberculosis sanatorium.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"I have need of silence and of stars,
Too much is said too loudly, I am dazed.
The silken sound of whirled infinity
Is lost 'midst voices shouting to be heard."

Is America's great need now a fresh sense of infinity and a new silence in which the soul may speak? William Alexander Percy's lines, quoted here again, brought from him when first quoted a few weeks ago, this comment: "I appreciate your feeling that I have been silent too much. There is still a lot of poetry in the world and a lot that poets need to say, but somehow it does not fit into the old pattern. We need a Peter the Hermit, or a St. Francis. The right person, I believe, could kindle a great religious revival. Something of the kind must happen to the democracies, if they are to be saved."

From men of such divergent viewpoints as Franklin Roosevelt, Walter Lippmann, Bernard Shaw, Roger Babson, David Lawrence and many others have come the same thought, that there is need of a recovery of faith, or religious conviction and emotion alike, of loyalties beyond economic, nation, or class. To believe with all your soul, to love with all your heart, to belong to something so deeply that only silence and the stars can express it—that could bring men back to health and sanity and peace, perhaps.

Mr. Percy thinks we need a Peter the Hermit, a St. Francis, a "right person" to kindle a great religious revival if the democracies are to be saved. But it seems to us that the sum total of spiritual leadership and example required could never come from any one person. It must come from the thousands of men who are capable of it but are not now given to it. It must come from ministers in thousands of pulpits, from poets in many corners, from statesmen and editors and orators all over the lands. Our people are hungry for religion now, whether they think it will save their democracies or not. They want to be as devoted and inspired as German and Italian people are, and with infinitely better cause.

In a little speech to the Mississippi Press Association the other day Mr. Percy pointed out that what he means by religion is something considerably more than the ethical standards which tell a man not to swear or steal or drink or cheat at cards, or to stop his neighbor from doing these things. It is important, as the world swings back to religion, that this point be clear, in our opinion. Religion is a sense of goodness and greatness. It is a philosophy, an exaltation, a light to live by, and they are small-minded and petty-souled indeed who can think of it as nothing more than a law against drinking or a rule against telling lies.

Sick abed as this is written, we are impressed again with the importance of a sweetly striking clock. It makes the passage of time a dignified rather than a purely mathematical thing. It divides all the hours and their halves. It invades each room and brings the whole house together. Edgar Guest said that "it takes a heap of living to make a house a home" but we think a striking clock can do a great deal.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

PETER'S DENIAL.

Sunday's lesson brings us to the other side of the picture—last Sunday it was Peter's vision—to-day it is Peter's denial. That proves how very human Peter was. The lesson is found in Luke 22:31-62. The golden text is most fittingly chosen, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." I Cor. 10:12.

Jesus put Peter on notice that Satan was going to sift him. Forewarned should mean forearmed. More than that, Jesus told Peter that He was praying for him that his faith fail not. Then came Peter's vain boast, "Lord, I am ready to go with Thee, both in prison, and to death." Jesus warned him against such foolish boasting, but to no avail.

When they arrested Jesus and carried Him to the high priest's house that night, Peter followed was something deep down in his heart that spurred him on. Right there we see the battle in Peter's case, and right there we see the battle in our own experiences—the battle between right and wrong.

Trembling, Peter stood on the edge of the mob. He wanted to go to the side of his Lord and own Him as King and Priest, but Satan was sifting too swiftly for Peter's fragile faith, and before Peter knew what he was doing, he crept over and sat down with the enemies of his Lord. That finished him for that battle. They looked at him with accusing eyes—"This fellow was with Him!"

"Woman, I know nothing about Him," blurted out Peter.

Another spokesman said, "Why, you are one of His followers."

"Man," said Peter, "I am not."

A third accuser said, "That fellow was with Him. He is a Galilean!"

"Man," said Peter, "I do not know what you mean!" Instantly, just as Peter was speaking, the cock crowed. Jesus turned and looked at Peter. Peter went outside and wept bitterly.

There you have the process of Satan's subtle schemes in trying to destroy the followers of the Master. First, Satan got Peter to make a foolish boast. Second, he went to work to hem Peter up in a situation that everyone would interpret as being an utter destruction of Peter's boast. Satan knows how to put people on the spot. Third, we see the grief which sin always brings—Peter went out and wept bitterly.

LEGION POST HOME SITE IS SELECTED

Lyle Brewster Considers Building Near College Park Golf Links.

Construction of a home on a site near the College Park municipal golf course is being considered by Lyle Brewster Post No. 50, American Legion. The building will serve as quarters for the post and its auxiliary.

A lot has been tentatively selected and plans are under consideration for inaugurating a campaign for funds to purchase the site and begin work on the home, which the post expects to complete during the current year.

At a recent meeting, the Lyle Brewster unit voted to maintain a booth for the sale of polo buttons in the lobby of the Heung Grady hotel. This booth will be opened Monday, it was announced. The post and auxiliary also will sell the polo emblems in College Park.

Igualada Falls Under Franco Smash

Spanish Rebels Capture Key City in Defense of Barcelona; Franco Escapes Death in Air.

HENDAYE, French-Spanish Frontier, Jan. 20.—(UP)—Spanish Insurgent armies under General Francisco Franco smashed through both north and south wings of the Loyalist "ring of steel" protecting Barcelona tonight and then reported a climactic thrust through the center with the capture of the city of Igualada.

Within a few hours after a Rebel radio report that Franco had narrowly escaped death in a burst of anti-aircraft shrapnel while on an inspection flight over the Barcelona suburbs, a swift series of official dispatches from both sides confirmed a day of triumphs for the insurgent armies that carried them to within 25 miles of the government capital.

Seize Calaf.
The first Rebel advance came on the north sector where Franco's troops crashed through Loyalist defenses and seized the mountain town of Calaf, which controls a big network of roads.

The government admitted loss of Calaf, northwest of Igualada and on the road to Manresa at the head of a valley that provides a clear sweep down to Barcelona.

Then came an official announcement that General Juan Yague's Moroccans had smashed through the southern flank and encircled Vendrell, the government stronghold on the Mediterranean coast. The Rebels occupied the village of San Jaime de Domenys, five miles north of Vendrell, and then smashed down on the town of Arbos, where their rifle fire cut the highway leading from Vendrell to Barcelona.

An official Loyalist announcement also admitted that Vendrell was lost.

The third and most stunning blow to the Loyalists came with an official announcement by the Nationalist military headquarters at Burgos that Igualada, in the center zone and on the highway leading to Barcelona, had been entered by insurgent troops after a long aerial and artillery bombardment.

Breaking of the defenses of Igualada, which the Insurgents said they entered early in the evening, apparently meant that the Loyalists had lost the key city in the main defenses around Barcelona. Government troops admittedly had been falling back before the Rebels at the gates of Igualada, although the importance of the city was such that strong attempts to counter-attack were expected. At 10 p. m., the rebels reported they were fighting from house to house in the outskirts of Igualada.

Loyalist advisers described fighting as the most severe of any day throughout the Franco offensive which started from the Segre river sector two days before Christmas and now has sliced off a huge three-cornered chunk of Catalonia. This triangular area which Franco now controls is about 50 miles long at its base on the Mediterranean, representing about 80 miles on one side of the triangle running northward from Vendrell through Igualada and to Pons; and about 110 miles long on the third side which represents the lines along the Segre river prior to start of the offensive.

INSURGENT BOMBS KILL 30 TO 35

BARCELONA, Jan. 20.—(UP)—Between 30 and 35 persons were killed today in Rebel bombing ranging from Villanueva to as far north as Arenys del Mar. Numerous persons were reported wounded. Prat de Llobregat, Vegas, Cornell, Vallirana and Masnou were also bombed.

VALDOSTA MERCHANTS OPPOSE TAX ON SALES

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
VALDOSTA, Ga., Jan. 20.—Resolutions voicing strenuous opposition to the proposed sales tax for Georgia were adopted last night at a meeting of the merchants' section of the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting was called and presided over by Sam D. Register, chairman of the merchants' section. The sales tax issue was discussed generally by leading merchants and when voted upon was unanimously voted down. The secretary of the chamber was instructed to notify the Lowndes county representatives, H. B. Edwards and Guy C. Connell.

TANKER LOST AT SEA CARRIED MEXICAN OIL

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 20.—(AP)—It was learned here today the Norwegian tanker Jaguar, which broke in two and sank in an Atlantic gale Thursday, was en route to Germany with a cargo of oil from Mexican expropriated wells.

The 91,386-barrel cargo of fuel oil was understood to have been obtained from the refinery of the Aguila Oil Company, Royal Dutch Shell subsidiary which was among 17 foreign petroleum companies taken over by the government, March 18, 1938.

Warmer and Fair Forecast for Today

Warm, fair weather is scheduled for Atlanta again today, George W. Mindling, of the United States Weather Bureau, said yesterday.

The low this morning will be near 36 degrees, the weatherman said. This added the mercury would probably go higher than yesterday when it climbed to 58 degrees. The low at the city office yesterday was 38 degrees while a minimum of 33 was recorded at the airport.

and dominated by the automobile industrialists.

Behind the present open warfare in international union ranks lies a factional dispute that has continued for more than a year, dating almost to the 1937 automotive sit-down strikes.

Martin, former minister turned labor leader, became the first president of the UAW when it split from the American Federation of Labor in 1936. One of his closest associates was Richard T. Frankenstein, stocky vice president and former college football player.

Previous Suspensions.
Friction developing between Martin and other international officers resulted last June in the suspension of Frankenstein, Secretary Treasurer George F. Addes and three other vice presidents who Martin charged engaged in a "Communist plot to seize control" of the union. They replied that Martin's advisers were former Communists.

CIO mediation smoothed things over temporarily, but Martin recently charged that his opponents had constituted themselves "a union within a union," and were disrupting the UAW. Reinstatement of the suspended group had placed Martin foes in control of the executive board, governing body of the union between conventions.

"Communist" Purge.
Stirred by Martin's recent "Communist purge" of a Detroit Plymouth UAW local and charges that he had secret dealings with Ford Motor Company officials, the executive board assembled 10 days ago to investigate. It finally approved his negotiations with the Ford company, but stripped him of his editorship of the union's weekly newspaper and imposed other restrictions designed to prevent him from controlling the forthcoming convention.

Martin had requested the calling of the convention to end "once and for all" the factional fight, saying he was ready to submit his administration to the vote of the rank and file.

However, he criticized the board's regulations for the convention, saying it would restrict representation to one-third of the membership by its suspension of charters of 134 locals more than three months delinquent in dues payments.

Negotiations Suspended.
Before the latest factional outbreak, the UAW was negotiating for revision of its agreement with General Motors Corporation; Martin said these negotiations have been "suspended."

Martin's opponents contended he had no authority under the constitution to suspend them while the board was in session. Martin, whose action was taken early this morning after an all-night conference with his advisers, retorted that "the board was not in session when I acted."

Atlanta Suspended.
The officials Martin ordered suspended today are Frankenstein, Addes, Vice Presidents R. J. Thomas, Wyndham Mortimer and Ed Hall; and these board members: Charles Millard, Oshawa, Ont.; Delmond Garst, St. Louis, Mo.; Fred Pieper, Atlanta, Ga.; Paul Miley and Richard Reisinger, Cleveland, Ohio; Ellsworth Kramer, Toledo, Ohio, and Morris Field, Walter Reuther, Leo La Motte and Tracy Doll, all of Detroit.

They were joined in their session by F. J. Michel, Racine, Wis., and Russell Merrill, South Bend, Ind., board members.

Thomas, only vice president to escape the purge last year, issued a statement tonight saying: "I have come to the parting of the ways with Martin because I did not approve of his dictatorship within our union and his 'company union' attitude toward manufacturing."

He charged Martin had a "one-man dictatorship complex."

Publicity-Seeker Gets It and Jail

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—(AP)—A young woman stood at a busy street intersection today with an eight-foot snake wrapped around her neck and declared to Policeman Bechtel "there's no law says I can't."

But, said Bechtel as he watched the growing traffic jam: "I can charge you with disorderly conduct."

And he did.

The "snake charmer," who admitted she was hunting publicity, was released for a hearing later.

her millions, Miss Weyant said: "Good, I hope."

She is one of four children. Her father, George W. Weyant, died five years ago. In business in New York at one time, he knew Rupprecht, and through him others in the family met the Colonel.

In recent years, Miss Weyant said, she had seen Colonel Rupprecht with increasing frequency, serving as hostess at week-end parties on his estate and visiting him almost every day during his long illness.

Miss Weyant lives with her mother and her brother, Rex, who has been assistant traveling secretary of the Yankee baseball club for several years.

When someone suggested to Miss Weyant that she might try running the Yankees, she smiled and said, "I'll leave that to Ed Barrow."

She added she was interested in baseball but had never attended a game with Rupprecht. Music and an interest in animals are her hobbies, she said.

Born in Winthrop, Mass., she attended school at Stamford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass. After graduation from high school, she came to New York to go on the stage and appeared as a chorus girl in "Three Cheers" with Will Rogers and "The Merry Melodians" with George M. Cohan.

Her last stage appearance was six years ago with the Civic Repertory Group.

Colonel Rupprecht's will, admitted to probate today, named two nieces, Helen Rupprecht Sillick (Mrs. Joseph Halloran) and Ruth Rita Sillick (Mrs. J. Basil McGuire), both of Greenwich, Conn., as the other major beneficiaries.

The Lenox Hill hospital was bequeathed $150,000 and the Colonel's collection of art objects goes to the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Byron Clark Jr., Colonel Rupprecht's personal lawyer, said Miss Weyant was "a very dear friend of the Colonel's, a charming lady whom I have met socially."

Colonel Rupprecht's detailed will took special precaution to insure the perpetuation of his beloved baseball team and made no effort to disguise his pride in the team's prowess.

CHINA ASKS POWERS TO ACT FOR PEACE

Foreign Minister Suggests Notes Be Followed by Concerted Move.

CHUNGKING, China, Jan. 20.—(AP)—China's foreign minister, Wang Chung-Hui, suggested in an interview today that the United States, Great Britain and France follow up their notes to Japan with concerted action to bring about a peace in the Far East.

The three occidental powers have notified the Tokyo government they did not recognize that "a new order" existed in China as a result of Japanese conquest.

"Now that strong notes have been sent to Japan," Wang said, "the most important thing is to take concrete steps, with other powers interested in the Orient, to propose formally to Japan at least a procedure of settlement, if not the very terms which are deemed fair and equitable to all in settlement of the Far Eastern question."

As for the war itself, Wang said he hoped the French government would extend full facilities for the transportation of munitions for China across French Indo-China in accordance with the resolution adopted by the League of Nations.

KENTS WILL VISIT IRELAND IN MARCH

Bombing Will Not Change Plans; British Police Are Armed.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Sir Wilson Hungerford, secretary of the Ulster Unionist council, said today that the projected trip of the Duke and Duchess of Kent to Northern Ireland in March will be carried through despite the current series of explosions in Ireland and England.

Sir Wilson admitted, however, that the trip of the king's youngest brother and his wife was "not a thing which we are doing with delight" in view of the widespread activities of the illegal Irish Republican army, which he blamed for the bombings.

Hatred for England's king is among the tenets of the I. R. A. Five days of terrorism by bombing, aimed principally at power and water supply centers, induced Britain today to supply guns to her usually unarmed police forces. Only a few picked men ordinarily are permitted to carry fire-arms in peacetime.

Meanwhile, London police arrested an Irishman who was charged with possession of three tons of explosives. He was the 16th arrested since the wave of explosions began Monday.

Reform Phase of New Deal Is Over, Hanes, Treasury Official, Predicts

Tells Carolina Business Men Government Now Seeks To Aid Recovery

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—John W. Hanes, under-secretary of the Treasury, told businessmen tonight that the administration was ready to turn from reform legislation to measures promoting economic recovery.

In a speech prepared for a chamber of commerce dinner, the former Wall Street broker said the most hopeful sign of business-government co-operation was the paragraph in President Roosevelt's opening message to congress saying the country had substantially completed its program of social reform and that existing measures needed only "machining down."

"To be perfectly frank with you," Hanes said, "I do not believe the country has yet realized the full significance of this declaration of national policy."

Hanes also predicted improving business and cited housing, railroads, public utilities and taxes as fields offering most important opportunities for government and business to get together in the promotion of recovery.

As the Treasury official in charge of taxes, Hanes said there was little prospect at present of a balanced budget.

Of business he said that "there are signs that we are now beginning to enjoy what should be a reasonably long and sustained period of good business, increased production and employment."

Hanes came from Wall Street to the Securities Commission about a year ago and was transferred to the Treasury last July. He was widely publicized for getting 16 prominent industrial and financial leaders to sign a co-operation offer to the President last year.

LEAGUE INDORSES CHINA AND SPAIN

Resolution Invites Members To Help Two Invaded Republics.

GENEVA, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The League of Nations council passed resolutions today in favor of China and government Spain.

The council invited League members to consult with "similarly interested powers" to take effective measures to aid China against Japan "should this appear appropriate."

With Peru and Bolivia abstaining, it condemned bombardments of civilian populations in Spain and praised the Spanish government's pledge not to send its planes across the battlelines to retaliate for such bombardments.

The resolution concerning China was aimed principally at obtaining consultation with the United States, tonight Dr. Koo left Geneva for London.

U. S. HALTS SALE OF JAPANESE BONDS

War Issue Barred by Securities Commission Action in Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The Securities Commission announced tonight it has halted the sale in Hawaii of a Japanese bond issue to raise funds for hostilities in China.

The commission said it had secured an injunction from the United States district court for Hawaii, restraining the Doshikai, otherwise known as the Patriotic Bond Subscription Society, from soliciting subscriptions in Hawaii for a 1,000,000-yen issue of Japanese emergency bonds.

The bonds are known in financial circles as "the Chinese incident issue."

About $56,000 collected will be returned, the commission said.

Shift Hints Nazi Push to West

Pertinax Views Schacht Ouster To Mean Hitler Will Turn From Middle Europe Against Powers.

By PERTINAX.
(Copyright, 1939, by The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

PARIS, Jan. 20.—(By Wire) Hjalmar Schacht's departure from the presidency of the Reichsbank is interpreted here to mean that Chancellor Hitler will not, for the sake of monetary stability, relax the progress of German armaments and loosen German's rigorous autarchy.

At the same time, the financial embarrassments with which he has to contend following the annexation of Austria and the dismemberment and subjection of Czechoslovakia clearly indicate it would take a long time and require fresh exertion, ending in the practical enslavement of Rumania and the setting up of a Ukrainian state, to make the scheme of Mittel-Europa a paying concern.

It is inferred, from all of the above facts, by some competent observers, that the Hitlerian Reich may turn against the western powers sooner than had been generally expected, and, for that purpose, make use of the opportunity afforded by Italy's claims against France.

Spare No Feelings.
The substitution of Economics Minister Walther Funk for Dr. Schacht may be regarded as an indication that the Berlin government intends less than ever to spare the feelings of the Anglo-Saxon world and concede even to the humblest extent, an adjustment of mutual interests. Not to speak of Dr. Schacht, Captain Fritz Wiedemann, among the men surrounding Hitler, was known to favor a moderate course toward England, France and America. He is now appointed to the general consulate at San Francisco.

An About Face.
Some weeks ago, there were signs that the next move of German policy was likely to be made in an eastern direction. For instance, on October 24, Ribbentrop dealt very bluntly with the Polish ambassador to Berlin, who emphasized his own government's fundamental objection to a Ukrainian undertaking. Later, it was reported that a Ukrainian legion was being recruited in Vienna.

Today, evidence accumulates that Hitler, when he received Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck at Berchtesgaden a fortnight ago, did his best to assuage the fears of the Warsaw government about Germany's eventual action in eastern Europe and to persuade it to renew and enlarge the German-Polish declaration of January 26, 1934, the starting point of "both countries' co-operation of late years. Von Ribbentrop, who is expected to reach Warsaw January 26 on an official journey, hopes to bring that negotiation to a successful end. It looks very much like a change of front.

Straws in Wind.
Moreover, the visit paid in Berlin by Count Czaky, the Hungarian foreign minister, and in Belgrade by Count Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, are other straws which show where the wind blows. It is believed on good authority that Hungary's military contribution to the Berlin-Rome axis was discussed in the first case, and Jugoslavia's neutrality, on the assumption that a Franco-Italian conflict would break out, in the second.

As a result of these various steps hurriedly taken by German and Italian diplomacy more and more heed is being given here to repeated warnings that the French and British governments have received and are still receiving from diplomatic sources, to the effect that Hitler will not fail to lend his full support to Premier Mussolini when the latter formally submits to the Paris cabinet his program of territorial and political changes in the Mediterranean and in Africa.

Mobilization Anew?
A representative of a great power in Berlin has even gone so far as to announce that a decision had been reached by the Fuehrer and his advisers to order a partial mobilization of the Reichswehr to begin on or around February 15. The same method of concealment employed last summer would be followed, and military maneuvers would supply a convenient pretext. Three weeks later, Germany would have under arms one and a half million men. The trial of war would then be started in practically the same manner as that of four months ago.

Whitehead Coming Back to Atlanta—in Irons

Tommy (The Terror) Whitehead begins his journey to the Atlanta federal penitentiary. Nonchalantly smoking a cigarette, the 22-year-old fugitive leaves federal district court at Knoxville, handcuffed to Deputy Marshal Chester R. Hackney, to start serving 10 years. Leg irons are partly concealed by his trouser cuffs.

WHITEHEAD TO BED HERE FOR 10 YEARS

Tommy talked with several of the workers, and convinced four of them to give him their salary checks.

Whitehead, who entered a reformatory school at Nashville at the age of 11, and says he spent six months on a Georgia chain gang at the age of 14, readily explained "that little escape down in Chattanooga."

"I was drunk at the time," he said, adding, "I'm not trying to lay anything off on anybody, but the liquor was given me by a guard, and I didn't know what I was doing."

A Memorable Night.
He did plenty, however, according to police, on that memorable night of last December 26. He overpowered a guard, and, using a smuggled pistol, changed into the guard's clothes and fled the hospital, where he was recuperating from wounds suffered two weeks previously when he was captured in Lake View, Ga., by federal men.

He commandeered an automobile in Chickamauga and drove to the Ashby street home of his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Aiken.

Mrs. Aiken called their father, Connie Whitehead, who brought his son a suit of civilian clothes. The father pleaded with his son to surrender, but Tommy declined. He spent the night sleeping in the automobile. January 5, while federal men and city police combed the city for him.

The next day, Tommy had gone. His relatives were subsequently arrested for harboring a criminal.

Still an Actor.

Tommy was arrested in Huntsville, Ala., by two FBI agents, January 16. There again his acting instinct asserted itself, according to federal agents, and Tommy posed as an agent and passed worthless checks.

He was returned to Knoxville. Locked in leg irons that clanked at every move, Whitehead spoke glibly and disparagingly of the south.

"I played the sucker states down south," he said, "because the folks are easily fooled. Down here, they'll believe anything you tell 'em."

Now, Tommy will tell it to a cell.

SENATORS INDORSE HOUSE RELIEF CUT

Appropriations Subcommittee Injects Proviso Against Winter Slash.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—A reduction in relief funds was approved today by a senate appropriations subcommittee, but with an added proviso that work relief rolls shall be maintained almost intact through the winter months.

This action, intended as a compromise, was nevertheless followed by definite indications that it had served, if anything, to sharpen the controversy over how much shall be made available for WPA for the remainder of the fiscal year.

President Roosevelt asked for $875,000,000. The house, with a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats in command, cut the figure to $725,000,000. The latter sum was approved today by the senate subcommittee.

Restricted Reduction.
At the instance of Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, however, the subcommittee added an amendment requiring that:

"The number of relief workers shall not be reduced by more than 5 per cent before April 1. That, regardless of prior restrictions, WPA may appropriate the $725,000,000 over the period between February 7 and June 30 as it sees fit."

That if an emergency arises, President Roosevelt may submit a request for an additional appropriation, with a statement of the facts.

The administrator of WPA shall make an immediate investigation looking to the elimination from the work relief rolls of "those not in actual need."

F. D. Blue Plans Fight.
Administration senators were obviously dissatisfied. They planned an effort to restore the $875,000,000 figure when the issue goes to the full committee tomorrow, and, that failing, a second effort to raise the appropriation on the senate floor. They thought they had a fair chance of success.

Since the house approved the lower figure, there has been an evident trend of senate sentiment toward backing the appropriation asked by the chief executive. "We don't want anyone put off the relief rolls and into the snow," Byrnes said.

Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, chairman of the full committee, said he informed the subcommittee he intended proposing a reduction of $600,000,000, but found that he was "the only member who wanted economy" and that "it was useless to make the motion."

The subcommittee's vote was as follows:

For: Senators Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina; Townsend, Republican, Delaware; Tydings, Democrat, Maryland; Glass, Democrat, Virginia; Adams, Democrat, Colorado; Russell, Democrat, Georgia; Nye, Republican, North Dakota, and Hale, Republican, Maine.

Against: Senators Overton, Democrat, Louisiana; Hayden, Democrat, Arizona, and McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee.

term financing. This had been abandoned in April in favor of obtaining funds through long-term financing and taxation.

Rearmament, road building and Hitler's determination to endow Germany with gigantic buildings had been financed through so-called "emergency" bills rescinded by the Reichsbank. These made up what is frequently referred to as Germany's secret debt because the exact figures are never disclosed.

Their amount has been estimated at between 12,000,000,000 and 16,000,000,000 marks ($4,800,000,000 and $6,400,000,000).

Schacht in April tried to halt this ever-growing secret debt and force private investors to hand over their money to keep the government running.

Financial quarters agreed this failed partly because Nazi leaders would not permit increased taxation and partly because frequent government long-term loans kept the private capital market dry.

Pressure for cash during the autumn European crisis caused a return to short-term borrowing and differences of opinion between the Reichsbank president and Nazi leaders.

In a letter to Funk yesterday Hitler ordered him to Nazify the bank "which was withdrawn from supreme sovereignty of the Reich by the Dawes plan," and transform it "into a German bank of issue unconditionally subjected to the sovereignty of the state in conformity with National Socialist principles."

This was interpreted by financiers as meaning that credit inflation would be jacked up to meet needs of Nazi expenditures.

Such inflation, it was said, also would enable Funk to satisfy another of the tasks Hitler assigned him, namely to open up the money market so that private borrowers could get cash.

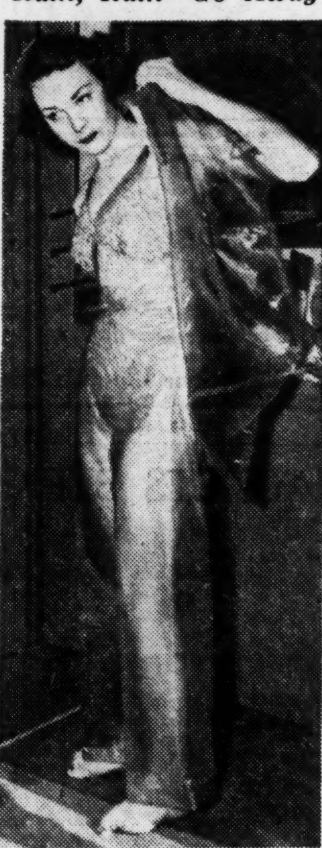

Funk also was enjoined by Hitler to safeguard "the absolute stability of wages and prices" and maintain the present value of the mark at about 2.49 to the dollar.

Jews in Despair.
German Jews sank back in despair with the passing of Schacht from his post and the breaking off of his negotiations with Rublee and the international committee for their emigration.

Rublee through the United States and British embassies last night asked the German government whether there was hope Germany still might co-operate toward getting Jews out of Germany.

The news service Diest Aus Deutschland which is close to the foreign office will say tomorrow that Funk's appointment means "the elimination of the United States as a source of supply" for Germany. The service quotes an article published by Funk that Germany henceforth will buy from "the Balkans and Turkey" what it used to get from the United States.

Drawing Ridiculing Roosevelt Seized

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Pen-and-ink drawings ridiculing President Roosevelt were seized today by Boston detectives, who said they were destined for distribution at a Boston dinner (unidentified).

Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, announcing that he would seek obscene literature warrants tomorrow, declared: "It is also a time some respect was shown the office of the President of the United States. In some foreign countries, instead of waiting until the next day to obtain a court warrant, officials would order an immediate firing squad for such an offense."

Post Office Holds Yule Atmosphere --25,000 Cards

A Christmas atmosphere still lingers in the dead letter division of the Atlanta post office. J. F. Alexander, clerk in charge of the division, said employees are trying to locate approximately 25,000 Atlantas who failed to get their Christmas cards because of incorrect or careless addressing.

Approximately 15,000 of the 25,000 cards bore 1-2-cent stamps on the envelopes. Treated as circulars, they are given only one handling. But the 10,000 others are first-class mail and are given dead-letter handling. It costs the government approximately 16 cents to handle a dead letter, Alexander pointed out.

JUDGE J. S. AYERS, JEFFERSON, DIES

Former Legislator Succumbs After Long Illness.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. JEFFERSON, Ga., Jan. 20.—Judge Jere S. Ayers, 68, for 14 years judge of Jefferson city court, died in a hospital today after several months' illness.

A native of Habersham county, he attended and was graduated from the University of Georgia before coming here to enter the practice of law—a profession in which he became widely recognized for his ability. During his career here, he served Jefferson as mayor, and served as Jackson county representative and later as 33d district senator in the general assembly.

Judge Ayers is survived by four sons, Sanford Ayers, of Atlanta; Nathan Ayers, of High Point, N. C.; Richard Ayers, of Baltimore, and Addison Ayers, a student at Harvard University.

Rites will be held at 11 o'clock Saturday morning in Jefferson Baptist church, of which he was a member, the Rev. A. B. Elizer officiating. Burial will be in McKenzie, Tenn., beside the body of Mrs. Ayers, who died several months ago.

4 ADDRESS STUDENTS IN MT. BERRY CHAPEL

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. MOUNT BERRY, Jan. 20.—Dr. Earle Pierce, of Minneapolis, former president of the Baptist Northern Convention; Dr. Paul Rood, of Los Angeles, president of the World Christian Fundamentals Association; Dr. Ryland Knight, pastor of Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church, Atlanta, and Edwin S. Preston, secretary of Shorter College, Rome, were guests and speakers in Mount Berry chapel yesterday.

Dying Man Seeks Aid In Locating Friend

A touching letter requesting police aid in locating a dying man's best friend was received here yesterday.

It was from David Brewer, of 500 East Trade street, Charlotte, N. C., and asked help in finding Chester W. Foster, believed to be somewhere in this state. "Doctors have told me I have only a short time to live," wrote Brewer. "Foster is the best friend I've ever had, and I want to see him before I die."

PAI APPEAL VOICED BY COBB TEACHERS

Executive Committee Calls on Legislature To Meet Promised Salaries.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. MARIETTA, Ga., Jan. 20.—The executive committee of the Cobb County Teachers' Association today had approved a resolution calling on the state government to practice "economy and retrenchment," and urging the legislature to give first consideration to the school financial problem.

The resolution set forth that "the state has failed to pay the teachers' salaries on time, subjecting them to great financial embarrassment and humiliation," and declared "we have been unofficially, but authentically advised that with present revenue the state will be able to pay only three and one-half months of the seven-month school term."

The association resolved that "the general assembly of the state of Georgia be urged to give the schools of the state its first consideration, and that by economy, retrenchment, or by some other means provisions be made for the immediate payment of teachers' salaries."

School Commissioner F. T. Wills, of Cobb county, told a gathering of county school trustees and officials at the dedication of a $55,000 gymnasium-auditorium at Pittsburg last night that they "need not expect pay for more than three and a half months" unless the state legislature acts to relieve the "desperate financial crisis" confronting Georgia schools.

The school commissioner said he had conferred with Representative James V. Carmichael, of Cobb; Speaker Roy Harris, of the house, and state school officials yesterday in an effort to devise a plan for meeting salaries for the remainder of the year.

NEW ENGLANDERS LOSE FUND BATTLE

Forest Clearing Appropriation Increase Will Be Sought in Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—New England congressmen, seeking increased federal funds to help clear forest lands devastated by hurricanes last September, turned hopefully to the senate today after the house refused to increase a $3,000,000 recommendation by its appropriations committee.

The Budget Bureau had approved a $5,000,000 proposal, but the committee lopped off $2,000,000 and added a requirement for states to match the federal money.

The appropriation will be used for salvage and to reduce fire hazards by removing fallen timber from private and state lands.

Representative McCornack, Democrat, Massachusetts, offered an amendment to the bill to restore the appropriation to the Budget Bureau's figure, but the economy-minded house rejected it.

The president said $5,000,000 "was needed," McCornack said. "The agriculture department asked for eight, I hope the house will give New England the consideration to which it is entitled."

Three New England senators have introduced separate bills to appropriate $5,000,000 to $600,000 for the purpose. Representative Rogers, Republican, Massachusetts, said she was certain the senate would increase the appropriation to $5,000,000 and that the house would concur.

Stolen Porcupine Of Docile Nature Only With Owner

"Smoky Lady," one of two tame porcupines owned by A. Dean Lindsay, of Ocala, has been stolen. In a letter to The Constitution, Lindsay said the cage holding "Smoky Lady" was taken from the left front fender of his automobile while it was parked in Social Circle Wednesday.

Recently Lindsay brought his two porcupines to the Constitution office and they roamed around the room as docile as house cats.

"But," Lindsay warned in his letter, "I am the center of their docility. When they are around others their wild instincts return. The porcupine feared alike by the lion, tiger, panther and gorilla. I miss 'Smoky Lady' terribly and would like to have her back."

"Rusty Boy," the male member of the pair, was lonesome, too, Lindsay said.

CZECHS EXPELLED FROM TESCHEN AREA

TESCHEN, Poland, Jan. 20.—(AP) Polish authorities today expelled 500 Czechoslovaks from the Teschen area, following an outbreak of border incidents.

The Czechoslovaks were accused of attacking Poles along the border last Wednesday and again early today. Formerly a part of Czechoslovakia, Teschen was ceded to Poland as an aftermath of the Munich settlement.

BLACKSHEAR BOY DIES OF COLLISION INJURIES

WAYCROSS, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP) Twelve-year-old Carlton Cagle, of Blackshear, who was injured when he collided with an automobile near his home Wednesday, died today in a Waycross hospital.

The car was driven by Mrs. Vernon Thomas, of Patterson, formerly of Waycross. Eye-witnesses told an investigating state patrolman that the accident was unavoidable.

Jackets Face Stern Test in Green Wave Five Here Tonight

"You seem to have been inoculated with luck last year when you picked the Crackers to win everything—even in the face of strong criticism and despite the fact that a first-year manager had the club," this fellow said.

"What I would like to know now is how the Crackers will do this summer? Bill Beckman and Tom Sunkel, the 20-game winners, are gone.

"What do you think the Crackers will do, with the present pitching staff they have, and with rookies in important positions?"

Well, sir, Paul Richards has just walked in the office and we'll ask him.

"How about it, Paul? How are things going?"

"I wish I knew how to get out of it," Richards answered. "Maybe I can tell them I am a resident of Atlanta now."

"What's that got to do with how the Crackers are going to fare and how will being a resident help?"

"It really doesn't have anything to do with the Crackers," Paul responded. "I happen to be talking about grand jury duty at Dallas, Texas. I have been summoned to report there on January 30."

"And I don't for the life of me, see how I can spend an indefinite period in Dallas and at the same time be here and get things ready for spring training."

Paul Richards is in somewhat of a quandary. If he can't convince the Dallas judiciary that he is an Atlanta resident and his time between now and March 5 means something to him, he will have to depart the end of this month and trust to luck the sessions aren't too long.

As to the Crackers, he is not so sure. On paper, he thinks the club looks better than the pennant winner of last season. But there are rookies in several spots. Everything depends on how the rookies do. If they come through, all well and good. If not—well, it may be a long summer.

MAY STAND ON PRESENT STAFF.

It doesn't seem very likely the Crackers will take on another experienced pitcher. Manager Richards expects to stand on the present staff.

Which means that, outside of Bob Durham, Clyde Smoll, Luman Harris and Larry Miller, the Crackers have little in the way of mound experience.

Two outstanding rookies—Harry Johnson and Pete Stein—mean much to the success of the club. If they come through, as expected, the Crackers will be okay as to pitching. There will only be one left-hander on the staff. That's Smoll. There were two last year—Sunkel and Leo Moon.

Dealing in probabilities, and viewing things from a January angle, it seems the Crackers can very well do with no more pitching additions.

Last year's staff started out as X, the unknown quantity, and Sunkel and Beckman came through with flying colors. Smoll conceivably might take Sunkel's place and one of the young right-handers might make the fans forget about Bill Beckman's performances.

I recall a couple of years ago when Dutch Leonard was drafted. It was thought then that nobody could take the place of the Flying Dutchman.

The Crackers are in a very fine position with regard to young pitchers. They will have the benefit of the catching experience of Paul Richards, one of the best.

He made a 20-game winner out of Bill Beckman and he might do the same thing with some other pitcher on the present staff.

Of course, it is not very reasonable to look for a 20-game winner every year. There aren't many of this species in the entire league, season after season.

It was a pitcher's league last year. But the cycle may change and the batters may vault into the saddle in a new season. There is no way of telling in advance about such things.

Neither is there any accurate way of telling what other clubs will offer the strongest opposition. Last year, for instance, Nashville started out rather weakly and wound up as one of the strongest clubs. It happened that Brooklyn had a number of young fellows available for the Vols.

SPEED TO BURN.

The Crackers will have speed to burn. Manager Richards will be the slowest man on the nine and he is no lead foot. A defensive outfield of Oetting, Rucker and Mailho suggests jack rabbits wearing baseball gloves. They can really cover ground.

And there is the tentative infield of Rubeling, third base; Peters, shortstop; Anderson, second base, and Bolling, first base. This quartet can cover ground.

MUNGO OFFERED CHANCE TO EARN $15,000 IN 1939

Contract Calls for Only $5,000; He Must Produce, Says McPhail.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—(AP) Although Van Lingle Mungo, a fireball pitcher by trade and firebrand socially in baseball, has been offered only $5,000, he stands a chance to make the $15,000 he received last year.

All he has to do is make good. That's what Larry McPhail says, and he signs the Brooklyn pay checks.

In San Francisco today, McPhail said he didn't have any trouble signing players. Then someone mentioned Mungo. And speaking of Mungo, McPhail had plenty to say.

"Last year," the Dodgers' boss said, "Brooklyn paid Mungo something like $15,000 to win four games. That's pretty high. So this year we sent him a contract for $5,000. We really don't expect him to sign. He's a southern gentleman from Pageland, S. C."

"But if Mungo does sign and he shows that he can pitch winning baseball, he will be paid off accordingly, and maybe he will get $15,000 a season again, but not until he shows that he is worth it."

"Last year the Brooklyn club paid him $100 an inning and paid him $3,750 for every game he won. He is just too much of a luxury for the Brooklyn club. Pageland is his spot if he wants more money than Brooklyn offers and personally I don't care what he does."

"He can pitch for the Pageland Reds for his corn grits and gravy or he can come to Brooklyn for better than the union scale. Life is too short to worry about fellows like that."

"Yes, sir, we have so little trouble signing our players that some of them haven't got their contracts yet."

ELWOOD COOKE UPSET AT MIAMI

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 20.—(AP) Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore., seeded third, was eliminated today from the Miami Billmore tennis tournament but the other seeded players advanced to the quarter-finals in straight sets.

Cooke, ranked sixth nationally, dropped a 6-2, 8-6 thriller to Hal Surface, of Kansas City, who ranks 17th.

Surface tomorrow will meet Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Ore., seeded second. Sabin disposed of Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, 6-4, 6-4.

In the other bracket top-seeded Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, made short work of Martin Buxby, of Miami, 6-1, 6-4, while Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, trounced John Shostrom, of Chicago, 6-0, 6-1.

Mako and Tidball opened their doubles campaign by trouncing George Parks and Jack Waters, of Miami, 6-1, 6-2. Surface and Cooke defeated Stewart Kenyon and Judge Beaver, of Miami, by the same score. Sabin and Shostrom whipped Gus Ganzemuller, of New York, and Campbell Gillespie, of Atlanta, 6-1, 6-3. Mulloy and Charles Mattman, of New York, defeated John Doeg, of New York, and Buxby, 6-1, 1-6, 8-6.

Russell High Teams Beat North Fulton

Russell High basketball teams won a double-header from North Fulton on the Russell court last night. The boys' score was 30-26, and the girls', 22-13.

Three tied for high-point man in the boys' game. McCoy, of Russell, shared honors with Benton and McConnell, of North Fulton.

In the girls' game Hunt, of North Fulton, was top scorer with nine, followed by Irvine, of Russell, with six and Marwitz, of North Fulton, with five.

Russell will play the Marietta teams tonight on the Marietta courts.

The victories were the Russell girls' eleventh and the boys' tenth in 12 starts.

Baby Jackets Play Lanier Poets Tonight

MACON, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP) Basketball fans of Macon will be afforded the greatest bargain bill in years tomorrow night at the city auditorium.

Mercer University basketballers will play the University of Chattanooga quintet immediately following a game between the Lanier Poets and the Georgia Tech freshmen.

Clark U. Five to Seek 7th Straight Tonight

Clark University's crack basketball five, which has won its last six starts, will be seeking its seventh straight win this afternoon against South Carolina State College, on the courts of the Clark gymnasium on the campus.

The Clark team is considered by many observers here as being one of the strongest teams in the south and the South Carolina Bulldogs challenge the Atlantans supremacy of the courts this afternoon. One of the hardest games of the current season is indicated because the relative strength of the two teams involved.

Bowling Sweepstake Is Scheduled Tonight

A large field of bowlers are signed to compete in the weekly handicap duckpin sweepstakes to be rolled on the downtown alleys this evening at 7:30 o'clock, with seven cash prizes being offered to winners in the meet.

No entry fee other than the cost of the five games will be charged. Men and women compete in the same event for the same list of awards.

Handicaps are computed on a two-thirds basis from the scratch mark of 120, with the players getting the two-thirds the difference between their own average and the scratch mark of 120.

Al Lopez Quickly Signs Bee Contract

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 19.—(AP) Northbound mails last night carried Senor Al Lopez's signed contract for the 1939 playing season as catcher with the Boston Bees, less than four hours after it was delivered to him. It's Al's tenth major league contract and his fourth with the Boston National league club.

"I have never had any trouble with the Bees," Lopez said. "The contract was satisfactory in every respect and there was no need in delaying my signing it. I can't tell you the figures because the club's policy is against such publicity."

Lopez is now professor of catchery at Joe Stripp's baseball school at Orlando.

Sobel Accepts Terms For Krieger Match

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 20.—(AP) Arrangements were completed today for a February 22 boxing show featuring Tony Galento, of Newark, against Abe Feldman, of New York, in a heavyweight bout with Solly Krieger, N. B. A. middleweight champion, meeting Ben Brown, of Atlanta, in a non-title ten-round.

The Miami Boxing Commission approved the program and Manager Sam Sobel signed for Brown, last of the four to come to terms.

EXTENDS CONTRACT.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 20.—(AP) Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, announced today the contract of Head Football Coach Warren E. (Tex) Tilson, had been extended one year.

CHAMPIONS AND THEIR CHANCES.

For 1939—Football.

LOS ANGELES.—T. C. U. and Tennessee—or Tennessee and T. C. U.—closed out the campaign of 1938 as the two top football teams of the country. I doubt that 11 men from either team could have beaten Pitt's first 11 men in condition.

But football today is a matter of squad strength—not team strength. Pittsburgh had nothing to offer in its second or third string. T. C. U. and Tennessee had. Pop Warner ranks Pittsburgh's first eleven as the best he has seen in many years—and Pop's Temple team played Pitt, T. C. U., Holy Cross and other strong ones.

I am not going to get into any argument as to whether T. C. U. or Tennessee was the better team. Those who saw both rank them even—well above the Rose Bowl contingents of Southern California and Duke. I don't think either Southern California or Duke would have had a healthy chance against either winning outfit in the Sugar or Orange Bowls, which drew the pick of the season's strength with something to spare. The Rose Bowl this time was a third-place show.

T. C. U. and Tennessee had enough glitz from a great season. They needed no concluding argument. They were the best from over 400 teams. Much the best, in my opinion. They were two of the best of many seasons, not 1938 alone.

About 1939.

The next campaign will offer us another story. T. C. U. loses Davey O'Brien, Ki Aldrich and big Hale. Replacing these men will be no simple run-around. They were tops. But Dutch Meyer has something left. In fact he has a lot left, if he can dig up another good passer.

Tennessee will have another great squad—facing just an ordinary schedule. It is no schedule to match what Notre Dame, Southern California, Temple, Carnegie Tech and others must face. The Tennessee schedule includes only three or four fairly hard games. Tennessee has too fine a team to waste upon most of the opposition it will face in 1939.

Southern California returns enough material to get by unbeaten. If it plays smart, keen football, the man power is there. Duke loses Tipton, Hill, York and many of its stars.

The Balance of Power.

Through 1939 I believe the balance of power will swing back to the middle west.

Northwestern should have one of the star teams of the Big Ten. So should Michigan. So should Notre Dame, a team that still needs badly a high-ranking blocking back.

These three teams have the weight and the speed. All have outstanding sophomores coming on to another year's experience, plus freshman strength. They are equipped to go a long way. They have such men as Bill De Correvont at Northwestern—Tom Harmon at Michigan—Bob Saggau at Notre Dame.

Ohio State, another dangerous entry, and Indiana, with its 1938 sophomore list. Minnesota is always a power. It will be again.

The middle west should reach a new high peak this next season. It should be the strongest football sector in the United States.

The East.

The east may be due for a slump after its 1938 strength. Pittsburgh loses 10 seniors—including three of its four backfield

WEIGHTLIFTERS TO VIE TONIGHT

With a few more entries received yesterday, the All-Dixie weightlifting championships to be held tonight at the Tech High-Boys' High gymnasium looks like one of the biggest weight-lifting shows ever held in the south. The meet is being sponsored by the Tech High school track team.

Karo Whitfield, chairman of the Southeastern A. A. U. weightlifting committee, states that from the looks of the entries most of the present A. A. U. records will be broken. There will be five body weights contested, and the lifter making the highest total poundage on the three Olympic lifts will be declared the winner in each body weight class.

Entries to date include:
148-Pound Class: William Parham, Athens; Moody Gault, Chattanooga; R. Borden, Athens; Roy Bradley, Athens; C. Whitlock, Atlanta; Louis Church, Anderson; S. C. Calcano, Chattanooga; Ed Seale, Chattanooga.

181-Pound Class: R. Hammond, Anderson; S. C. Sanford, Atlanta; Norris Benbenky, Atlanta; J. Ball, Athens; M. Bray, Athens; Ralph Bradley, Athens; Willard Curry, Athens.

Heavyweight Class: L. Goldschmidt, Athens; J. Payne, Dalton; E. Elliott, Atlanta.

Abraham Baldwin Beats G.M.C., 31-23

TIFFIN, Ga., Jan. 20.—The Golden Stallions of Abraham Baldwin College defeated G. M. C. of Milledgeville last night by the score of 31 to 23. It marked the 10th victory of the year for the Stallions out of 13 contests.

Bearden, Stallion forward, hit the hoops for 10 points to pace the Stallion attack. Franklin, G. M. C. forward, also was hot, shooting a total of 10 points for the evening.

Baldwin led at the half, 16 to 9, was never in danger throughout.

The Stallions will seek their 11th and 12th victories of the season here next week when they meet the fast Armstrong Junior College quintet from Savannah.

Sports Writer Dead; Body Is Found in Bay

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 20.—(AP) Charles J. (Chilly) Doyle, veteran sports writer of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, automatically became president today of the Baseball Writers' Association of America as the result of the death of President Paul Shannon.

Shannon, 64-year-old Boston sports scribe, drowned in Pass-A-Grille bay near St. Petersburg, Fla., when he toppled from a sea wall. His body was recovered today.

Budge Goes Five Up On Ellesworth Vines

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 20.—(AP) Don Budge won for the fifth successive time in his tennis duel with Ellesworth Vines tonight, scoring, 8-6, 1-6, 6-4, over the world's professional champion.

The victory gave Budge a margin of nine victories to four in his tour with Vines.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., Jan. 20.—Cedartown High basketball teams this week added three games to schedules which now include 17 games. New games are with the boys' and girls' teams of Summer-ville, two, and Buchanan.

TULANE BRINGS EXPERIENCED 5 HERE FOR GAME

Mundorff May Shake Up Tech Lineup for S.E.C. Struggle.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Tech will get a chance tonight to live up to Coach Roy Mundorff's pre-season predictions.

Before the first game Mundorff said the Jackets would be lucky to win two games. Vanderbilt has been defeated and the Jackets have an opportunity to win their second game in three starts tonight at 8 o'clock when they meet the experienced Green Wave, of Little Monk Simons.

The Tulane moved into our town with few wins but plenty of experience to test the sophomores of Tech. The Wave made an unsuccessful invasion of the Pacific coast in early December but at the same time learned just what it is all about.

Tulane lost two games to Alabama and split a pair with Frank Johnson's Mississippi five in their only conference battles thus far.

THIRD AT HOME.

Tonight's game will be the third straight on the Tech's home court. Just what will happen to the inexperienced Jackets when they hit to road against Georgia in Athens next Saturday remains to be seen. Anyway, Mundorff fears the worse.

"Home games mean a lot to any basketball team," he said. "Just look what happened to us last year on our trip to Louisiana. Both Tulane and L. S. U. bumped us."

There may be some changes in the Jacket starting lineup tonight. Mundorff is still undecided on his opening five but it is believed Walter Haymans will start at one forward place instead of Morris Bryan, a sophomore.

Jim Williams will likely be at the other forward, Jim Hughes at center, George Smith and Junior Anderson at guards.

Anyway, this has been the opening five in scrimmages this week. Haymans was a reserve last season, but saw little action. However, he played well against Vandy last week while Bryan was somewhat of a disappointment against the Commodores and Mercer.

Tulane will present a tall and rangy outfit against the Jackets. Al Bodney, star football player, will be at center. He is replacing the All-Southeastern Skyline Neylan, who finished fourth last year.

Visitors will be a team from the University of Tennessee. Captain Gene Harmon and Paul Krueger at guards.

BLEACHERY NIPS WARREN, 50 TO 48

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

TAYLOR, S. C., Jan. 20.—Southern Bleachery's fast-breaking quintet captured a thriller from Warren here tonight to make it two straight over the Atlantans, 50-48.

Connie Mac Berry, ex-N. C. State ace, led the winners with 15 points while the Warrens also found it hard to guard Bert Hill who accounted for 12.

Fred Bradford got 15 points for the visitors but Harrison Anderson was the outstanding man for the losers. The ex-Georgia Bulldog sank 10 points and played a bang-up floor game.

Bleachery held a 22-15 lead at half-time.

The Warrens play Greer, S. C. Guards tomorrow night and have a return game against the Bleachery with the Celtics Sunday, January 29, at the Warren arena.

Ex-Savannah Catcher To Manage Waycross

WAYCROSS, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP) Bobby La Motte, executive vice president of the Savannah baseball club of the Southeastern league, and Earl Mann, director of the Atlanta Crackers, will come to Waycross next week for a conference with officials of the Waycross club, member of the Georgia-Florida league.

Atlanta, Savannah and Waycross will work under a three way agreement.

La Motte was in Waycross yesterday, meeting with the executive committee of the Waycross club. He was guest of local sportsmen at a bird hunt.

He revealed that Al Leitz, former Savannah catcher, will be sent here as manager, arriving here about March 1.

S'Western Cancels Knox Tilt With Vols

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 20.—(UP)—Coach Ed Kubale, of Southwestern University, announced today that his team would not be able to play the University of Tennessee September 30 in Memphis as scheduled.

The cancellation left the possibility that the Vols might be able to schedule an intersection all game unless one of the conference games would be shifted to fill the date.

Holy Cross had offered to play Tennessee November 25, the Saturday before the Thanksgiving game with Kentucky.

McSpaden Upsets 2 Bulldogs Trounce Chattanooga, 66-41

Cecil Kelly Fires 24 Points, Dan Kirkland 15, As Georgia Coasts To Victory.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 20.—Leading from start to finish, the University of Georgia basketball team tonight trounced the Chattanooga University cagemen by a score of 66 to 41.

Behind the brilliant marksmanship of Captain Cecil Kelly, the Bulldogs reached their highest point of efficiency of the season. Teamed with lanky Dan Kirkland, Red and Black center, the Macon ace accounted for 24 points.

Kirkland sank 15 points, many of them difficult one-handed shots.

Kopcha, a heavy set forward, stood out for the visitors with a fine floor game and 17 points to his credit and his running mate, Wheat, tallied nine counts for second place in the 'Noogans scoring honors.

The Bulldogs were at no time forced to extend themselves to maintain a safe lead although they were a little slow in getting started after the half-way recess.

The midway point found the Athenians with a comfortable margin as the score board hung at 29 to 23.

SIX RELIEF MEN. Coach Elmer Lampe utilized the services of six relief men in addition to Captain Kelly, Kirkland, Joe Killian, Roy Chatham and Alex McCaskill—the stalwart five starters.

Chatham was able to play only half of the game because of a pulled muscle sustained in practice last week and Captain Kelly joined Kirkland on the bench after exceeding the foul limit.

Coach Lampe rested Chatham the second half and held out little Frankie Rentz, diminutive and spectacular guard who has a bad ankle, in an effort to have the entire squad ready for action next week when the Bulldogs take on two of the south's strongest quintets.

They encounter Alabama Monday night and then do battle with their arch rivals, Georgia Tech, Saturday night.

It will be the third game of the week for the Cadets, who broke even in the first two games of the city prep race.

The victory over Marietta Wednesday afternoon was the only one for the Cadets thus far this season.

G. M. A. has a busy schedule for next week, also playing Tech High on Tuesday, and Spartanburg, S. C., on Friday. The Cadets draw a bye in the opening of the second round of the prep race next Friday and scheduled Spartanburg on the open date.

ALL IN THE GAME

There is one other player who ought to play regularly. That's Marshall Mauldin. He is a fleet center fielder. Mauldin also has possibilities as a third baseman. He broke into pro ball as a third baseman.

Should it turn out that Mauldin doesn't break in as a regular, he would make a very fine utility player.

There doesn't seem to be much question about the defensive qualities of the Cracker team. And with Richards back of the plate, Peters at short and Mailho in the outfield there seems sufficient experience to balance the rookie side of the ledger.

How this nine will hit remains to be seen. There ought to be a lot of hits beat out. And a fast nine, such as this, often can make its own breaks.

This may develop as the fastest club in organized baseball and one of the most interesting Atlanta fans have seen in many years. It will pack considerable of that intangible quality known as color.

A DELIGHTFUL PARTY.

There was a most delightful party at Monroe last night honoring the G. I. A. champions.

Coach Alexander, of Tech, expressed it most aptly when he said it is really something for a team to win a championship in any sport. And Jess Neely, head coach at Clemson, made the boys feel good when he pointed out that he has been trying to win one for nine years at Clemson—and is still trying.

Many fine citizens of Monroe, coaches from Clemson, South Carolina, Georgia and Tech and Atlanta visitors and newspapermen were included in the gathering of almost 200.

Attractive girl students served the fried chicken and accessories. Everybody was there, including Faith, the baby girl the school recently adopted. Faith slept through her short introduction and never even had a chance to participate in the banquet to the extent of a bottle of milk.

Bud Harris and Captain Grayson, of G. M. A., the team Monroe's Aggies defeated for the state title, were present, and Coach Harris told the guests what a great privilege it was to honor the same team twice.

Red Barron, David Irenus, the Red, has done a remarkable job with the school, not particularly from a football standpoint but from the angle of scholastic endeavor.

From a student body of 52 the school has grown, in a comparatively short time, to a student body of 656.

Ex-Governor Clifford Walker, who has the job for life, served as toastmaster in his usual inimitable fashion. The speeches were good and the food was better. There was a genuine spirit of comradeship in evidence on every hand.

And a good hand was extended Red Barron's assistants, Tobe Edwards and Whack Hyder, and the fine ladies who aid in making the institution as wonderful as it is.

It won't take more than a moment's notice to return next year whether, as Red Barron said, "Monroe wins a championship or not."

Monroe Aggies Feted At Gridiron Banquet

Alexander, Butts, Enright, Neely Among 200 Enthusiasts Present.

By ROY WHITE.

MONROE, Ga., Jan. 20.—Monroe Aggies, Georgia's prep football champions, were honor guests here tonight as more than 200 outstanding citizens and football enthusiasts enjoyed the annual banquet.

Former Governor Clifford Walker was the toastmaster and called upon, not only Monroe's coaches and players, but many college coaches who were invited to be present.

Headed the coaches were W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, who coached Red and the remainder of the Barron football stars at Tech; Wallace Butts, University of Georgia's new coach; Rex Enright, South Carolina; and Jess Neely, Clemson College, Assistant coaches present included J. V. Sikes and Ears Whitworth, Georgia; Vernon (Catfish) Smith, South Carolina, and Frank Howard, Clemson.

Bud Harris and Captain Grayson, coaches of the G. M. A. team which lost the state championship present included J. V. Sikes and Ears Whitworth, Georgia; Vernon (Catfish) Smith, South Carolina, and Frank Howard, Clemson.

Miss Grace Powell Honored at 2 Parties At Driving Club

Miss Grace Powell, prominent bride-elect whose marriage to Edward Hammond, of Baltimore, Md., will be an important social event of January 28, was honored yesterday at two lovely parties at the Piedmont Driving Club.

The first was the luncheon given by Mrs. Murdock Equen who chose a color scheme of green and white for her table decorations. In the center was a large green bowl filled with calla lilies and the same floral motif was used in the place cards. Garlands of smilax outlined the table which added an unusual effect.

Covers were placed for Miss Powell, the hostess, and Mesdames Arthur W. Powell, Arthur G. Powell, Toulman Hurt, Clarence Laws, Edwin Lochridge, Frank Boston Jr., Thomas M. Stubbs, Carl Lewis, Herbert Alden, John Barnett and Miss Yolande Gwin tied by Mrs. James Frazer for her tea which honored Miss Powell later in the day at the club. The affair was held in a private dining room and Mrs. H. Lane Young, mother of the hostess, assisted in entertaining.

The table was centered with a bowl of red roses and white narcissi arranged to resemble an old-fashioned bouquet. Placed on the table were flat hearts from which arose white burning tapers tied with bows of red tulle. Small ribbon streamers extending from the center piece to each guest's place were arranged with arrow studded hearts which served as place cards.

Covers were placed for Miss Powell, Mesdames Arthur W. Powell, Clarence L. Laws, James K. Rankin, John Barnett, James Therrell, Carl Lewis, Haynes McCadden Jr., Rucker Wayne, H. Lane Young, Miss Yolande Gwin, Miss Margaret Stovall and the hostess.

Slight Gains in Weight Indicate Definite Trend

By Ida Jean Kain.

How many pounds of weight did you gain in 1938? . . . and how many will you gain in 1939? If you added only a couple of pounds last year, and only a pound or so the year before, you probably think the increase is not worth noting. And you're right—unless these little gains are a definite trend!

That's the way the pounds sneak up on you. You can gain four pounds one year simply by taking half an average size pat of butter—about 50 calories—more than you need every day. Then if you grow a bit more careless in your food habits, the gain may jump to six or eight pounds in a year's time, then to 17 pounds in the year!

At that rate you can see how easy it would be to gain 40 pounds over a period of 50 years. You could gain that much just by eating above your daily calorie requirements one pat of butter or one chocolate cream or any other portion of food amounting to 100 calories.

Once you become calorie-minded, you will be on the watch for these extra calories. No matter how slowly you begin to exceed your calorie requirements, they all finally add up to excess weight. When you have eaten 4,000 calories more than you need, you can look out! Sooner or later they will register on the scales as an extra pound of adipose tissue.

This gradual accumulation of weight is what makes it so difficult to combat obesity. If it happened overnight you would be so alarmed that you would take steps to get rid of it at once. Unfortunately, it usually accumulates pound by pound over months and years, and you may even persuade yourself that it is only natural.

Overweight is not natural for anybody. Statistics show that a 10-pound gain over a 20-year period is the average—but, as you grow older you feel better and stand a chance of living longer with weight that is slightly under the average. So clamp down on your appetite the minute the scales start up. That's the only time it is easy to control your weight—at the beginning of a gain.

At this point, you may only need to substitute fresh fruit for

You Must Take Capillaries On Faith

By Dr. William Brady.

A professor of physiology and anatomy, formerly of Harvard, now of a state university, wonders what my authority was for the assertion, made in this column, that capillaries are not tubes or vessels at all but just space between the cells through which the blood seeps slowly while the interchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide between the body cells and the blood takes place.

The professor's gentle chiding letter arrived the day after Christmas. Was my face red when I read it? Seems as though there's always something—and how I envy a teacher who can say this and that is so and his students must take it or leave school in disgrace! Here I can't say anything any more unless I am prepared to draw back the curtain behind me and reveal to the menacing audience a veritable cloud of formidable authorities, who, willy-nilly, support me.

This time, though, I'm staying. Indeed I have peered through the microscope many, many times at beautiful cross sections of various tissues in which I saw, as clearly as my instructor could desire, the capillaries he wished me to see. I had to pass his examination, didn't I? But now that there is nothing to fear from telling the truth I solemnly deny that I ever saw a capillary tube or vessel. I don't believe any one else ever saw one either.

But after all, isn't all this bunk about capillaries just splitting hairs? What is a hypothetical capillary? A hair-like tube or vessel whose wall, believe it or not, (I don't) one must imagine is composed of a single layer of endothelial cells standing by themselves without any appreciable means of support or anything. If you must have capillaries you have to take them on faith.

Any one with idle curiosity may consult Gray's Anatomy of the Human Body, which is still an "authority" 78 years after the death of Henry Gray, and learn that these hypothetical capillary vessels the professor wishes to pre-serve average just 8-25,000ths of an inch in diameter; and that the red blood corpuscles are just seven and a half 25,000ths of an inch in diameter, if anybody can conceive such microscopic dimensions. But I believe, once the blood has reached the end of the ultimate arteriole it has only to seep through the cells of the tissue, for there is actually no wall there to impede it.

Shucks, maybe I'm as wrong as rain on Christmas about this but, after all, what does it matter? I'll believe there are capillary vessels when I see one clearly separated from other structures and all by itself. Capillaries are hair-like vessels, according to Webster. But not under the microscope, not by a jugful, for a cross section of a hair has a distinct formation, concentric layers of cells, similar to the cross section of a tree trunk. The hair is not tubular or hollow and does not "bleed" when cut, as barbers or hair dressers sometimes tell innocent customers.

New Furnishings For a New Home

Meet the smiling Browns! It's 1939—and this year they're going to make the first payment on their dream house, buy some new furniture, better clothes.

They said the same thing last year? True, but this time they back their dreams with a budget plan and they'll win!

Successful budget plans used by others of like income showed them about how much to spend on each item—food, clothing, rent, operating, advancement, savings. By keeping track of their expenditures for a month, they found out how "off" they had been on their own spending.

Too many high-priced delicatessen items, bought after their grocery had closed, ran their food bill away over the percentage it should have been.

Hereafter Janet will plan regular meals in advance. With an eye out for "specials" she'll stock an emergency shelf with potted meat, jellies, olives, to serve when guests drop in.

And they can easily keep their clothing bill normal.

Stockings last longer, now that Janet's careful to keep service weight on hand for walking, save sheers for dress wear.

Three-piece suits will do double duty for winter and spring—a great saving.

You probably have your own "leaks." The electric iron, for instance, you leave on while you answer the telephone—how it does eat up electricity!

Whether your income's high, low or medium, you can guard it against leaks, make your money buy what you really want with the help of our 40-page booklet, "How to Budget Your Income." Gives sample budgets from real life. Ruled pages for a year's daily entries. Work out a dollar-stretching plan. Make your money really count!

Houses Strike A Happy Medium

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

Monday—In the size of our homes, it looks as if we Americans were on one extreme to another . . . that is, we were so fed up with great big square places built in the 90's that we moved out of them into little houses no bigger than a minute. Now we're striking a happy medium—wanting enough space to live gracefully in, yet not so much as to be a burden. So you'll be hearing more about an extra room called anything from a den to a library, playroom or morning room, be it ever so small, saves an awful lot of bother and doubles nicely as a household office or a place for extra company in a pushy.

Tuesday—French furniture has always seemed a little too feminine and elegant for everyday living, but lately I've gotten quite sold on its essential beauty, especially as an accent with other furniture. A French chair, for instance, with either Georgian or Victorian furniture is charming, and sometimes it adds just that certain something to modern!

Wednesday—At a party the other night the decorations were so effective—huge clusters of green balloons hung like grapes and arranged with grape leaves made of crepe paper . . . also clusters of orange balloons with leaves to look like oranges. 'Twas a Mediterranean supper with spaghetti.

Thursday—A little girl I know is getting her room done over in pink and her mother is having a dressing table and curtains of white point d'esprit made very full. A flowered rug and a white tiled bedspread, and petticoat lamp shades of white point d'esprit with pink ribbon—and won't that be a room after a little girl's own heart.

Friday—I've always thought I couldn't work in rubber gloves, but recently after a spree of painting, my hands were a sight to behold. And when I said airily that I never could get my "effects" so well with rubber gloves, a surgeon present said, "Oh, you could, all right, if you had to." After that I humbly put on my gloves and went to work . . . and found that I could manage perfectly well when I gave up trying to feel arty about the matter.

Saturday—Here are some tips on draped dressing tables—a plate-glass top is a boon, but sometimes the top of the table won't be absolutely flat, so that the glass top rides it and doesn't stay put as well as it should. A quilted top to the dressing table is the answer here—the padding gives the plate-glass something to nestle into. Another point—if you have trouble about keeping the placket of the skirt from drooping, here's a solution—don't try to bring it up to be even with the top. Bring the covering of the top down to cover the exposed edge of the top board. Then have the skirt top even with the top of the front arms that open out.

Sunday—Little boy Jan! I made a gingerbread man and gingerbread rabbits this afternoon—so company coming in unexpectedly for tea found me all floury and my young son ditto but ecstatic.

Lovely Pinafores

By Barbara Bell

During the wintry evenings when you're indoors a lot anyhow, it's a fine idea to make several sets of this pretty design (1639-B) so that you'll be well-supplied with aprons when spring comes. Put two or three sets aside, too, as for the occasional gifts that you frequently need unexpectedly.

These two pinafores, one with a pointed bib-front and the other with double rows of braid, fit exceptionally well. They're nicely slim-waisted, with a flare at the hem, and they stay put, on the shoulders. The little tie-around—that you can finish in just about a minute—is a charming trifle. Each of these aprons requires such a small amount of material that you can make them out of the cotton remnants left over from house dresses.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1639-B is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 34 requires: For apron No. 1, two yards of 35-inch material and 12 yards of braid; for apron No. 2, 2 1/4 yards of 35-inch material and 9 yards of braid; for apron No. 3, 1 1/2 yards of 35-inch material and 3 yards of braid.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Winter Fashion Pattern Book. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns.

Greta Garbo will portray the star role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Madame Curie," soon to go into production. Robert Donat, who dislikes Hollywood, will play "Pierre Curie" if the film is made in England.

Glamorous Greta Garbo May Journey To London to Make Next Picture

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 20.—Robert Donat has received cable from Hollywood asking him to play Pierre Curie in the Metro production of "Madame Curie," starring Greta Garbo. Donat is currently making his second picture for MGM, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." His first was the highly successful "Citadel." There is no reason to think he will be averse to the Curie role, and it is a big "if," the picture is made in London.

The British actor has a strong aversion to Hollywood, which he believes treated him badly on his first and last visit. And, besides, there is still that little local matter of his unfinished contracts with Warners and RKO. So don't be at all surprised if the glamorous Garbo journeys to London to make the picture there.

First film for Margaret Sullivan after the birth of her second child is "He Who Gets Slapped," in which Richard Bennett starred on the stage and which was made as a silent with Norma Shearer, John Gilbert and Lon Chaney. Miss Sullivan, incidentally, is Hollywood's hottest academy award favorite—for her fine performance as "Pal" in "Three Comrades."

A matter of money is standing between Marlene Dietrich and the top feminine role in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Warners is willing to pay her $50,000, but Marlene is said to want a little more. This picture will cost $1,000,000 and have 83 sets. Latest additions to the cast, starring Edward G. Robinson, are Francis Lederer and George Sanders. Both play German soldier spies.

Watch the career of Robert Preston. Paramount is putting him into picture after picture as a prelude to stardom. Following "Union Pacific," Preston goes into "Beau Geste." After that, he plays top masculine role in "Disputed Passage," the Lloyd Douglas challenge to the medical profession of America—on the lines of "The Citadel." Dorothy Lamour supplies the feminine interest. And Akim Tamiroff is featured.

Universal is trying to get Carole Lombard and Ronald Colman to co-star in "Bull By the Horns," for which Irene Dunne and Jimmy Stewart were once scheduled. Yet another "little" picture for Shirley Temple—"The Little Diplomat," based on the recent and current European crisis. . . . George Murphy is definitely set as leading man in Metro's "Twenty Little Working Girls"—but don't get the title wrong—the girls are rich and work only for charity. . . . Chester Morris gets an important spot in "Of Mice and Men," to be directed by Lewis Milestone. Top roles will now probably be played by Wallace Ford and Broderick Crawford, who created them on the stage.

Lots of competition for the feminine role opposite Louis Hayward in "The Man in the Iron Mask." To date, Edward Small has tested Joan Bennett, Frances Dee and Sigrid Gurie. . . . Ronald Reagan shares billing honors with the "Dead End" kids in "Hell's Kitchen." . . . Preston Foster stars for Universal's "Key Woman." . . . Joe E. Brown has signed a two-year contract with Columbia and will make four pictures in all. First is titled "Call Me Joe." . . . Jane Withers' next for Twentieth Century-Fox is "Texas Kid." . . . Both MGM and Warners are preparing a script based on the life of Tom Mooney, who was recently par-

Teacher Brings Bridge Quiz

By Harold Sharpsteen.

With North and South vulnerable, East-West not vulnerable, the bidding goes:

East 2 D (?) South 2 D (?) What is West's correct bid, holding:

S-Q 10 3 2; H-J 3; D-K J 10 4; C-A Q 2.

Your answer: (2) S-Q 10 3 2; H-J 9 4; D-K J 10 4; C-A Q.

Your answer: (3) S-K Q 3 2; H-Q 9 4; D-J 10 4; C-A J 4.

Your answer: (4) S-K Q 3 2; H-Q 9 4; D-J 10 4; C-A J 4.

PLAY FOR POINTS.

(1) West's bid is to double South's vulnerable two-diamond overcall for penalties. While East-West may successfully negotiate a game in notrump there should be greater profits gained by West's penalty double. Should North rescue, there is still time to think about going on in notrump. If East's heart opening is sound, South should be defeated at least two tricks playing the deal at diamonds.

NOT A DOUBLE.

(2) West should bid two notrump, holding mild support for partner's hearts and substantial stoppers in South's diamond suit. The outstanding difference between (1) and (2) lies in the heart suit. Penalty doubles of low-level overcall bids are made only when holding a void, singleton or doubleton in partner's bid suit, at least J X X X in opponent's suit, and two honor tricks in the hand.

ALL-AROUND STRENGTH.

(3) West should make a free takeout in spades, in spite of it being a four-card suit. Normal trump support for partner's opening heart bid and all-around

MY DAY More Freedom, Less Enforced Respect

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON.—Our son, Elliott, finally was able to depart last night. The last snowstorms have been a little disturbing to anyone who wished to travel anywhere by air, and he was obliged to change his plans several times. However, even leaving later than he intended, he will be in Fort Worth, Texas, sooner than would have been possible before airplanes were an accepted mode of travel.

It is interesting to talk to any young man today who is very keen about his work, because he is able to tell you of a number of things which seem to be successful even in these troublous times. The successful things usually show that it takes imagination and initiative today to do something which really goes over. If you have both, you seem to succeed.

The state of Washington provides me with an interesting letter and a newspaper clipping this morning. My correspondent asks that I answer her question in my column. This is the question: "I am inclosing a clipping, 'Is this called free speech?' The clipping is from a paper called 'The Statesman Index,' of December 30, and is headed: 'The Poet's Corner.' The name of the poem is 'Rejected.' The gist of it is that the present President of the United States 'came to the gates of hell, and the devil answered the bell.' All the faults of the administration come in for a rhyme, including personal things, such as his wife, and finally he is rejected, and these are the closing lines:

"And the Devil stood and his head he bowed; At last he said: 'Let's make it clear, You'll have to move, you can't stay here, For once you linger with the mob I'll have to hunt myself a job.'"

Strange to say the author is "Unknown."

Certainly, Madame Correspondent, this is freedom of speech. Anyone in this country has a right to state his or her opinion about anyone else. Even if you disagree with the opinion you must uphold this right, because that same right allows you to express your opinion freely as well. You are worried because you were taught to respect the office of the President of the United States regardless of politics, but this is not an attack on the office or even on the presidency. It is an attack on the man, and perhaps it is better to have more freedom and less enforced respect.

Last night I had the pleasure of speaking to the executive board of the National Federation of Women's Clubs and listening to a speech by a young Chilean woman doctor who holds one of their scholarships. This young woman is one of the leaders among women in Chile and it was interesting to see her interest in democracy.

Skipper, Mate, Can Prevent Mutiny on Marital Ship

By Caroline Chatfield.

When grown-ups are healthy, well fed, well clothed, clean, comfortable, owe no bills and have money in the bank, they are inclined to be at peace with themselves and their fellow men. When children have parted with tonsils and adenoids are kept busy with work and play, have been taught respect for authority, have three meals a day with ice cream and lollipops in between, they are amenable to reason.

And it happens that preventing mutiny on the marital ship is a simple matter for the skipper and mate who have made a sensible design for living and stuck to it. It is presupposed that they are on good terms with each other; confidential and affectionate. Of course they are agreed on their destination and the route they will travel to reach it.

Each year they have fixed a budget well below their income with a nice margin for emergencies and an extra surplus for surprises and a savings account for the rainy day of adversity. The budget has taken care of the outer and inner man. It has included an item headed Recreation, Amusement, Entertainment. It has provided for the celebrations of birthdays and special occasions on the calendar—gifts to friends, to church, to charity.

The budget was only the foundation of the design for living. Structure and superstructure, decoration and trimmings were added as they went along. There was ambition and determination to get somewhere in life and push the children ahead of them. And if they were half as good as Othello Compton who is the mother of four distinguished children, as well as foster mother of several hundred orphans, they have used her formula to rear their children: "The Bible and Common Sense."

Mother has made a home that was cheerful, comfortable, hospitable, and there has been plenty of fun and laughter and gaiety. Father has furnished the wherewithal and backed her up in everything she has done. The relationship between the parents has set the pattern for the children's relationship to them and to one another. Misunderstandings and fallings out have been quickly mended and forgotten. They have learned life's greatest lesson: how to get on with the people around them.

The children have been sure of a sympathetic hearing when they have gone to father and mother with their perplexities, their enthusiasms for the latest fads and their searching questions. When father and mother have said "No," they have reasoned with the children and tried to show them the rightness of their No. Failing, the children have had to accept the voice of authority.

Yet father and mother have been careful to substitute something pleasant for the requests that have been denied. Junior couldn't drive the car until he was 16, but they gave him a bicycle. Mary couldn't go riding at night with the boys, but mother made the boys welcome at her home and saw to it that the young people had games, music and a late snack.

strength of the hand justifies the free takeout by West.

Pattern 4040.

With spring coming along at a fast clip—you'll soon find yourself in need of distinctly new frocks like Pattern 4040. Isn't it a "daring" frock, reflecting as it does fashion's love for soft panels, and print-and-plain combinations? It proves once again how talented Lillian Mae is as a dress designer. . . . for the style is as simple to make as it is charming to look at! If you like, you can run up your frock in one, instead of two fabrics. And you may cut your sleeves long instead of short—though you'll find it hard to resist the cunning button-trimmed effect of the brief sleeves! Even the belt may be worn two different ways!

Pattern 4040 is available in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 2 7/8 yards of 39-inch fabric and 1 yard contrast.

THERE IS ONLY ONE
Nancy Driving at Night, Hits Tod;
Takes Him to Her Home for Attention

By Margaret Gorman Nichols.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
When Alix Barton is 16 her father, a clergyman in a Maryland town, and her mother die. Going to Baltimore, she is herself for secretarial work. She worries about her brother Tod who with other boys broke into a store and stole some things. He is now on a tramp steamer. After two years she meets Tuck Martin, a motherly social worker, and they share a snug apartment. Alix likes Eddie Barrett whose family has been wealthy but who is now making $25 a week. He loves Alix but it waiting until he earns more. He takes her to a party given by Don Lawrence and his debutante daughter, Nancy, where she meets and falls in love with Kurt Deering. Her employer is infatuated with a new stenographer and Alix, fearing demotion or discharge, resigns. Kurt takes her to dinner and she is attracted to her but can't forget Gina Rowland, the beautiful actress who is married to him. Nancy's mother, Bernice, who divorced her husband, Don, gives Alix a job. He kisses her but apologizes when she says she must quit. She spends a very happy evening with Kurt in New York until Gina speaks to her and returns. He does not meet the train next day to return home with Don. Nancy tells her he has never been "out of love" with Gina. Tod disappears; a note says he can't live on Alix. Heart failure forces Tuck to resign and buy a house in the country. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XVI.
Nancy turned her face away. "His head," Bernice asked haltingly. "Is it . . ."

"There's no concussion. Of course, he'd had a bad shock. I'd advise the hospital."

Nancy turned around. "No! Let me keep him here! We'll get nurses. They'd say I was speeding. I wasn't! I was going slowly but the car skidded and it was raining so hard I couldn't see. Nobody saw it happen." Covering her face with her hands, she cried, "I'll kill myself if it gets in the papers! I'll . . ."

The doctor looked up. "You'll have to make a report of it."

"I won't! I'll keep him here until he gets well and give him anything he wants, any amount of money, but I won't let it get in the papers! I'll . . ."

"Nancy," her mother said. "Go up stairs, dear. The doctor and I will talk this over."

When she left, Bernice said, "She has a horror of publicity, doctor. There's a good reason why. We were in the full glare of it at the time of my divorce from Mr. Lawrence. We'll do everything possible for this young man. If he isn't too badly injured, I, too, should like to keep him here."

He looked at Tod and then looked at her. "I understand. This young man, judging from his appearance, is undoubtedly a tramp. But perhaps that's a strong word. You read about a lot of boys roaming over the country these days, hitch-hiking from one place to another looking for work. Poor young devils."

As Bernice looked at the boy's bandaged head and at his mouth, grimly closed, she was grateful that Dr. Fenwick thought it safe to keep him in her home instead of sending him to a hospital and thus Nancy and she would avoid unpleasant publicity.

She said, "He's only a boy. Somebody loves him. I'll take care of him as if he were one I love, too. He's very young. And his being half starved is probably the reason Nancy managed to life him into the car."

"He's going to wake up with a terrific headache and wonder where he is," the doctor said, chuckling. "Some of these cases don't remember who they are. Then you really have something on your hands. He couldn't wish to be in better hands than yours."

He arose. "I'll have to leave him now but I'll be back later and see how he is."

"I won't leave him a minute. But before you go, will you take him upstairs. To Nancy's bedroom."

At 10 o'clock that night when he returned, he found both Bernice and Nancy beside the bed. "He opened his eyes," Bernice said, "and looked around. Then he went back to sleep. He's a fine looking boy. He isn't a tramp, doctor."

"I hope he'll be appreciative of your care and vigilance."

Mother and daughter stayed beside the bed all night. When Tod opened his eyes or when he moaned between clenched teeth, it was Nancy who got up and went to him.

Bernice said, "You were always one to go out of your way to help people, dear."

"And he's my charge, mother. Perhaps—perhaps we won't think so much about Alix and father, with him care for. Have you heard from her?"

Bernice glanced at Tod. "I wonder who he is, poor boy. No doubt a mother or a sister wonder where he is and worry terribly about him. Perhaps he's not sleeping because of him."

They were having coffee when the doctor came in early in the morning.

"I looked through his clothes before I came up," he said. "There's nothing by which we can identify him."

"It doesn't matter who he is," Bernice said. "He's our charge and our patient. Nancy and I need to be busy now."

Several days later Tod opened his eyes, tried to remember, and wondered where he was. Vaguely he remembered the three faces that had bent over him, the face of an elderly man, the woman with dark eyes, and a girl with very blue eyes. In these, his first moments of lucidity, he realized that he had been injured that day in a strange room, undoubtedly a girl's room. His head ached horribly.

Suddenly a girl was standing in the doorway with a tray in her hand. She wore a blue dress and a blue ribbon held back her brown hair. When she saw him looking at her, her eyes filled with tears. But she smiled.

He stared rudely. It was! Yes, he couldn't be mistaken . . . it was . . . Nancy Lawrence!

"What happened?" he asked. His voice sounded strange to him. "What?"

Putting the tray on a table, she went to the bed. "Oh, you're better! I'm so glad! This is the first time you've said anything." Briefly she told him what had happened and added, "It's my fault. I wanted to keep you here so that you'd get the best of care. I didn't want it to get in the papers I wasn't driving fast that day but it was raining so hard. Please forgive me."

Forgive her, he thought cynically. What were a few bruises and an aching head when you could lie in a room filled with sunshine and flowers and see a tray of food meant for you! He felt that he had slept for a century and had awakened in another world, a new and better world. He felt rested and fed and sheltered.

"Are you hungry? You were hungry that day, weren't you?" "I hadn't eaten for two days."

"Her eyes were wide. 'Where were you going? Who are you? No, don't tell me now. I won't ask you questions when you're still so weak. Later you can tell me. Jenny is a wonderful cook and in no time you'll be strong and feeling fine. The doctor says your injuries aren't serious."

He touched his head. "Not this either?" "I can feed myself now," he said.

Bernice came in then with Dr. Fenwick. Tod frowned, recognizing Bernice at once as the woman he had met at Alix's one Sunday afternoon. Did she know him? It had been in the half darkness that they met with his head bandaged and pieces of adhesive tape over his face . . .

Nancy said, "Well, doctor, you see what our good work has done."

"As I said before," said the amiable doctor, thrusting a thermometer between Tod's lips, "I hope this young man is appreciative of your care and vigilance. You'll be a brand-new man in a few weeks, young fellow, thanks to the good care and food you've had and will get."

"We're so glad you are feeling better."

No, Tod thought, she didn't recognize him.

They left him to sleep. When he awoke again, the moon was shining through the window and there was a sweet scent of honeysuckle in the room. Beside him, her face pale in the moonlight, her short brown hair fitting her small head like a cap, Nancy sat holding his hand. Tod was conscious of the warmth and smallness of that hand.

For days they talked cheerfully to him and brought him trays with delicious food. Often at night when he awoke he found Nancy beside the bed, holding his hand. When she was not there he missed her and wished she would come. Then one night he told himself that he must leave as soon as he could because he was in love with Nancy Lawrence. He had run away from Alix because he did not want to meet Nancy, did not want her to think of him as "Alix's worthless brother." Now he loved her, loved a girl who was too rich and too good for him.

With the help of Dr. Fenwick, Tod went outdoors for the first time to a deep soft chair beneath a tall shade tree. Nancy followed with pillows. Bernice dressed up a chair and took her knitting from a bag.

"We don't want to be inquisitive," Bernice said. "It really doesn't matter to us who you are. But you must have people who are worried about you because they haven't heard from you. We'll get in touch with them if you'll tell us."

"We don't even know your name," Nancy said. She was wearing the blue dress again and the blue ribbon that held back her thick brown hair.

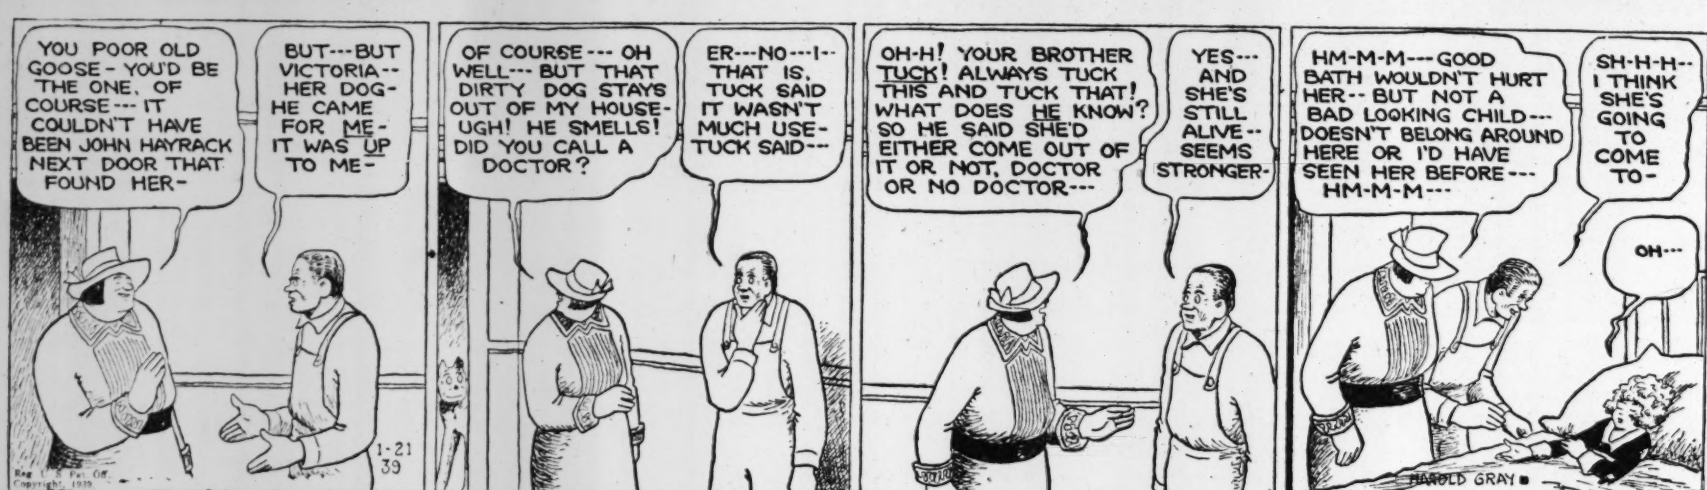

Resting his head on the back of the chair, Tod looked up through the branches of the tall tree, remembering that yesterday when the doctor had dressed his head, he (Tod) had said, "I want you to keep my head bandaged until I leave here, doctor. You see, I know who Mrs. Lawrence is but I don't want her to know who I am. I'd like to keep the disguise."

The doctor had chuckled. "This is an extraordinary case. Well, all right."

Now he thought of Alix. Why had he hurt her? Was it that he knew he had the power to hurt her because she loved him and, having been hurt himself, there was a grim pleasure in hurting her? He was ashamed now for many things. . . . What had happened to him? His eyes, so like Alix's clear eyes, looked at Nancy's hair stirring on her neck.

Dr. JOHN KAHN
AT J. M. HIGH CO.
STREET FLOOR

AUNT HET
By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

Resting his head on the back of the chair, Tod looked up through the branches of the tall tree, remembering that yesterday when the doctor had dressed his head, he (Tod) had said, "I want you to keep my head bandaged until I leave here, doctor. You see, I know who Mrs. Lawrence is but I don't want her to know who I am. I'd like to keep the disguise."

"It's hard to keep a new doctor in the country. The deadbeats all use him; and by the time he finds out which ones will pay, he's too discouraged to stay on."

Forgive her, he thought cynically. What were a few bruises and an aching head when you could lie in a room filled with sunshine and flowers and see a tray of food meant for you! He felt that he had slept for a century and had awakened in another world, a new and better world. He felt rested and fed and sheltered.

Two Hint Stevens Slew Lee

Cleyborn's Counsel Seeks To Raise Question of Credibility of Woman Who Tipped Off Police.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Jan. 20.—(P)—Defense counsel pointed again today to a white burglar as the real slayer, after attacking credibility of the state's star witness in the trial of George Cleyborn, negro accused of killing Dr. Charles H. Lee.

Two men employed at the "Brass Rail," a St. Simons Island resort owned by Co-Defendants Henry and W. H. Cofer, said Grady Stevens, now serving a prison term for burglary, left the Cofer's place on the night the 71-year-old rector was killed, saying he had to "go kill a dog."

The two, E. B. Lewis and Frank Cofer, brother of the accused men, said Stevens returned about 11:15 p. m. "blowing and out of breath." The "Brass Rail" is not far from the rectory of Christ church, where Dr. Lee was shot to death on the night of February 5 as he prepared a sermon.

Frank Cofer also testified Stevens' wife, Mrs. Carrie Stevens, was in the "Brass Rail" that night, but that he did not see Cleyborn. Mrs. Stevens climaxed the state's case yesterday with testimony that he saw H. J. Cofer pay Cleyborn $150 that night "to do the job."

The state rested its case this morning and the defense opened by calling several witnesses, including Macon police officers, who testified Mrs. Stevens had a bad reputation and they would not believe her under oath.

Cleyborn denied tonight any connection with the Episcopal rector's death. The defense rested after H. J. Cofer, one of two white brothers indicted for the midnight slaying, also denied any knowledge of the shooting. He was a defense witness.

Cleyborn, in his unsworn statement permitted under Georgia law, declared "I was born in Wilkes county and I've never been in trouble before. I don't know anything about the killing of Dr. Lee. If you convict me, you convict an innocent man. I don't know any more about killing Dr. Lee than a new-born babe."

H. J. Cofer said his relations with the Christ church rector had been pleasant and he had heard him preach on a few occasions. He testified he never left his place of business the night of the slaying from 9 o'clock until closing at midnight.

Three or four rebuttal witnesses will be heard tomorrow morning, to be followed by arguments. The case is expected to go to the superior court jury about 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Stevens and her husband, Grady, once were held as suspects in the Lee slaying, but police exonerated them. Later both pleaded guilty to a robbery charge and received prison sentences.

Stevens in Prison. Grady Stevens still is in Tattall state prison, but his wife was paroled to aid officers working on the Lee case. They credited her with furnishing information that led to the indictment of Cleyborn and the Cofer, operators of a "Brass Rail" establishment on St. Simons Island.

The killing of Dr. Lee occurred not far from the "Brass Rail" on the night of last February 5 the 71-year-old crusading clergyman was shot through a window of his study in the rectory of Christ Episcopal church.

Mrs. Stevens told the jury yesterday she was in the "Brass Rail" on the night of the slaying and saw Henry Cofer hand Cleyborn a roll of bills, at the same time ordering the negro to "do that job." She said Cleyborn named the amount after counting the money.

Lee Davis, a St. Simons Island farmer, who charged the Stevens with robbing his cottage last March, testified today the woman told him she and her husband were in his house the night Dr. Lee was killed and that they heard two shots.

Macon Witnesses. Among others testifying were T. M. Ware, Macon police lieutenant; Mrs. W. E. McCord, a policewoman; Miss Hovie Schofield, probation officer of the Macon juvenile court, and M. T. Hugly and J. F. Flint, of the Macon police.

Judge Gordon Knox had to warn attorneys once today when they became involved in heated arguments over the probable height of the person who fired the fatal shot at Dr. Lee.

Following up on some of yesterday's testimony along this line, the state called as one of its last witnesses Police Chief J. E. Register, of Brunswick, who told of reconstructing the crime at the rectory with the aid of Coroner J. D. Baldwin.

Register said they stretched a string to determine the apparent line of fire from where the slayer stood outside the window, and that Baldwin occupied the chair in which Dr. Lee was sitting.

From this, Register said, he concluded it was not necessarily a short man who fired the shots.

The defense, pointing to Cleyborn's height of six feet two inches, has endeavored to prove location of bullet holes in the window indicated a man shorter than that did the killing.

$50,000 INVOLVED IN BUSINESS LEASES

Two Pryor Street Buildings Listed in Transactions Announced Yesterday.

Two leases aggregating approximately $50,000 in rentals on semi-central business buildings were announced Friday. One was the two-story and basement building at 94-100 Pryor street, S. W., now occupied by the Mason-Komins Tire Company, leased by Henry A. Stephens, who will operate it as a storage garage.

The other was negotiated by the Shirley Clook & Dress Company, manufacturers, and was for the two-story building at 209 Pryor street, S. W., from the Greenfield estate.

The building leased to Stephens comprises about 27,000 square feet, and for the five-year term will yield about $20,000. The tire company will vacate it as soon as their new building on Central avenue is ready about March 1. It was leased from John W. Grant Jr., as agent for the owners, through Harry Crider, of the Adams-Cates Company, realtors.

The lease on the Greenfield estate building will be effective March 1. The structure contains some 20,000 square feet, and will be extensively remodeled. The lease is for seven years, involving approximately $30,000 in rentals. Gerald Blount, of Haas & Dodd, realtors, represented the owner, and Samuel Rothberg, realtor, the lessee.

CLASSICAL BALLET TO PLAY ERLANGER

'Pocahontas' and 'Billy the Kid' Are Included in Caravan Repertoire.

Ballet Caravan, unique troupe whose interpretations of the American theme by means of the classical dance have won them acclaim in New York, are now on tour and will open at the Erlanger theater tonight at 8:45 o'clock.

A wide variety of dance interpretations will be offered. Playing on the American theme, the program will include such offerings as "Pocahontas," based upon the famous Indian legend; "Billy the Kid," taken from the life of the famous desperado of the same name, and "Air and Variations," an out and out classical ballet in one act.

This last presentation is performed entirely to the immortal music of Bach, as arranged by Trude Bittman. Featured will be a two-piano arrangement and the male soloist, Lew Christiansen.

Outstanding among the members of the cast, according to Lew Christiansen, ballet master, are Giselle Cacialanza and Eugene Loring. After their Atlanta engagement, the troupe will go to Miami and Cuba.

A large attendance has been indicated by the advance sale that is being conducted by Mrs. Lafayette Butler, of Atlanta. This will be the first of a series of classical dance presentations planned for the Erlanger.

REFORM PROGRAM PUSHED IN ALABAMA

Electric Tax Urged at Raleigh; South Carolinians Take Rest.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 20.—(P)—Speeding Governor Frank M. Dixon's governmental reorganization plans toward realization, administration leaders pushed several of his most important bills through one house or the other today before recessing until next Tuesday.

Following adjournment today, the Governor said he was "more confident than ever" over the success of his program.

While most of the measures taken up today went through without a ripple of dissent, there were protests against hasty action in both the house and senate which, however, the protestants said should not be interpreted as "anti-administration" expressions.

NORTH CAROLINA TAX ON CREDIT PROPOSED

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 20.—(P)—The general assembly received today a bill to tax the sale of electric current, and its joint appropriations committee heard a proposal for the addition of graduate courses at the North Carolina College for Negroes, in Durham.

Representative R. H. Underwood, of Heford, introduced the new tax measure, which would provide for the levy of one-quarter of a cent a kilowatt hour on all electric energy produced or sold in North Carolina.

OKLAHOMA SOFTEN RED RIVER DAM STAND

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 20.—(UP)—The Oklahoma state senate, fearing reprisals from the federal government, passed a new resolution today softening the tenor of its demand for a halt in construction of the government's $54,000,000 Red river dam project.

The resolution was substituted for one passed yesterday asking congress to delay work on the huge reservoir until state authorities could make a thorough examination of the project.

The substitute resolution, its author said, was "to advise congress that the state concurred in the government's flood control policy and wanted no appropriations halted except those affecting the Red River dam."

BAILEY VICTORIOUS AT LITTLE ROCK

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 20.—(P)—The first test of Governor Carl E. Bailey's strength in the two-week-old legislative session resulted in a significant victory for administration today as the house crushed, 14-78, a senate proposal for creating of an honorary board to seek effectuation of highway bond refinancing.

It has been a long time since Miss Shearer and Gable have been seen together in a picture. "Idiot's Delight" is exciting, dramatic entertainment—a film of the Pulitzer prize play by Robert Sherwood. On the stage three acts were played in a single scene, but the motion picture version has no less than 167 scenes, requiring 42 sets.

In Clark Gable's bevy of glamor girls there are blondes, brunettes and red heads. And so with the Constitution's Glamor Girl contest. Your coloring matters not. Just get your most striking photograph to the Clark Gable Glamor Girl contest editor on the fourth floor of The Constitution building by 10 o'clock this morning. Cash prizes of $15, $10, $7.50, $5, $3, $2.50 and seven prizes of $1 each will be given to the most glamorous. In addition, there will be 25 pairs of guest tickets to "Idiot's Delight" opening January 27 at Loew's Grand.

There's still time—but not much! Prize winners will be announced in tomorrow's Constitution.

News of Gate City Told in Paragraphs

Cadet Private First Class Henry L. Berman, of Atlanta, and Cadet Sergeant Selwyn Lee Willey, of College Park, have been publicly commended for excellent work at Riverside Military Academy, now at its winter home in Hollywood, Fla. by their outstanding records. Cadets Berman and Willey have earned citation before the cadet corps of approximately 600 and have been named on the current honor roll of the academy.

Dr. Charles R. Adams, Fulton county commissioner, yesterday warned citizens of a "false son" racket. He said he had been informed that a person giving the name of Adams is seeking subscriptions to magazines and represents himself as Dr. Adams' son. The commissioner said none of his sons is seeking any subscriptions.

Division of Hapeville into wards will be proposed at the council meeting in February, it was announced yesterday. Under the plan four wards will be formed with one councilman to be designated from each. A fifth council member will be elected from the city at large and will serve as mayor pro tem. Present councilmen will serve out their terms, but successors will be elected from the wards they represent.

Final divorce decree was issued yesterday to Mrs. E. D. Rivers Jr., daughter-in-law of Governor and Mrs. Rivers, in Judge Paul S. Etheridge's division of Fulton county superior court. Mrs. Rivers, the former Miss Dorothy Byrd, was married March 19, 1932, in Florida, and separated April 25, 1938, according to the records.

Atlanta bank clearings continued to soar yesterday as transactions amounted to $14,300,000—a gain of $5,400,000 over the same day last year. The total represented two days as Thursday, Lee's birthday, was a holiday. This was the thirteenth consecutive day the transactions have increased.

Public hearing on allotment of the 1939 meatland can sugar quota will be held in Atlanta beginning February 7 in the old Post Office building, it was announced yesterday from Washington.

Rev. Jesse Hendley will address a joint meeting of the Merit Class and Men's Bible Class of Capitol United Methodist church at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. J. S. Hunt, vice president, announced.

Selection of Dr. H. T. Mathews, brother of Byron H. Mathews, of Atlanta, as "the most distinguished citizen" of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for 1938, was announced yesterday. The choice is made each year by the Fort Lauderdale Kiwanis Club and the title was awarded Dr. Mathews for his clinical work in dentistry for underprivileged children.

Appointment of J. A. Scott, well-known Atlanta railroad man and a member of the board of trustees of the National Order of Railway Conductors was announced yesterday. Mr. Scott lives at 220 Moreland avenue, N. E., and is an employee of the Georgia Railroad.

Police aid was sought yesterday in search for Colleen Free, 14, of an Atlanta avenue address, said to have left home Thursday night. She is described as five feet, one inch tall, weighing 102 pounds, and having dark brown hair and blue eyes.

Mrs. I. H. Sutton, state treasurer of the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, yesterday attended the annual board meeting of the organization in Macon.

Theft of lingerie and hosiery valued at $500 from a shop at 962 Peachtree street was reported to police yesterday. Entrance was gained by cutting a hole in the wall of an adjoining beauty shop.

W. C. Sockwell Jr., 22, of 89 Broad street, was cut and bruised about the face and head yesterday when he dozed at the wheel of his car and struck a telephone pole on Hemphill avenue, near State street, according to police. He was treated at Grady hospital, and then charged with reckless driving and accident.

R. D. McDuffie, 40, of a Cain street address, posted $200 bond and 10 other bonds of $100 each yesterday pending arraignment in recorder's court January 26, as the outgrowth of a raid Thursday night on Houston street, just off Pryor, in which police reported card and dice games in progress.

THREE ENTER RACE FOR COMMISSIONER

Alderman Hailey, E. B. Barrett and John S. Cowls Qualify.

Three new candidates, including two former mayors pro tem of Atlanta, yesterday added their names to the list of qualified candidates seeking to fill the unexpired term of County Commissioner George F. Longino, resigned.

I. Gloer Hailey, alderman from the sixth ward; former Alderman Ellis B. Barrett, and John S. Cowls, resident of Atlanta since 1884, qualified for the February 9 election with Ordinary Thomas H. Jeffries.

Hailey said James H. Ewing, Atlanta real estate man, who opposed him in the race for commissioner, "is supporting me in this race."

Charles M. Brown, campaign manager of Sheriff Aldredge, yesterday withdrew as a candidate, but the three other entries left nine in the field, with a prospect of several others before entry lists close next Wednesday afternoon.

Other Candidates.

Other qualified candidates are: James E. Jackson Jr. and O. Lee White, attorneys; Charles A. Willbanks and H. J. Foster, salesmen; Marvin Roberts, Buckhead druggist, and John B. Roan, jeweler. Hailey submitted his record as a public servant to the voters in an announcement. He is serving his second four-year term as alderman, and was graduated from the Atlanta Law school. He has been engaged in business in Atlanta for 22 years.

"I was a candidate for commissioner in 1938 when 215 votes out of over 24,000 votes decided the issue against me in favor of the incumbent," his statement said.

"I promise when elected to be a faithful, sincere and conscientious public servant, always putting the interests of the taxpayers ahead of personal opinion and not to use the office for personal gain or sectional benefit, but will consider the office as a sacred trust and so conduct myself that I may receive the 'well done, thou good and faithful servant' at the expiration of my term in office. I respectfully submit my candidacy to the electorate on Wednesday, February 9."

In his statement regarding his candidacy, Cowles pointed out that he would consider it an honor to succeed Longino "and when I am elected I will faithfully represent every section of Fulton county, giving my whole time and best thought to the work."

"If we have new capital to come into Fulton county, then we must be fair with capital already here," he added. "I came to Atlanta from Eufaula, Ala., in 1884, and this is the first time I have ever run for a public office. I am counting on my friends to support me as loyally as I have for half a century supported them."

Barrett previously had made his official announcement.
